DEMAND REVERE REFORM

Conditions at the State bath house at Revere have reached such an abominable condition that thousands of people who for years have been patrons of the State baths have been compelled to give up their sea bathing at a time when it is most needed and desired.

Rowdyism along the beach, stupidity in the handling of the crowds, insufficient police patrol, and insults to women and children while in bathing are among the conditions which have driven self-respecting people from this popular resort.

The primary object of the Revere Beach baths was a place where women and children could go and where conditions would be such that they would be protected from insult and injury. This object has been outgrown by the lawlessness which now prevails.

Reforms Are Demanded.

The Metropolitan Park Commission, in its zeal to make the bath houses pay, have permitted to grow up a system of abuses which it will take weeks and months to overcome. There are certain things that must be done at once or the beach will be ruined for the use of those whose taxes go to make the State bath houses possible. Here are some of the things which must be done at once:

Build a temporary addition to the present bath house on the available land adjoining the men's bath houses.

Change the system of giving out suits, so that men, women and children will not be compelled to wait from thirty minutes to an hour in the broiling hot sun.

Abolish the absurd rule which prevents one member of the family from getting a bath house without the entire family standing in line for nearly an hour at a time.

Give women and children and mothers with their babes a chance to get a bath house without standing in the broiling hot sun.

Rowdyism Is Rampant.

Abolish rowdyism on the beach.

Provide more police and arrest all transgressors of the comfort and order of people on the beach.

The driving of respectable people from the beach by the conditions which have been allowed to spring up has led to a riot of rowdyism on the beach. Here are a few examples of conditions there as taken by an eye-witness within a few minutes of one another:

Half a dozen men bathers began throwing mud at one another. A finely dressed woman and man were standing near the edge of the water. A cake of mud struck the woman square in the face. It spattered all over her white dress. Did the rowdies stop to apologize? Not much! They dashed off into the water yelling in glee at the discomfort of the man and the horror of the woman.

RILEY, HOOSIER POET, GIVES CITY $75,000

INDIANAPOLIS, July 12.—Dr. James Whitcomb Riley, the Hoosier poet, has made this city a present of a plot of ground at Pennsylvania and St. Clair streets valued at $75,000, to be used as the site of a new public library and school administration building. The gift is unconditional, and Mr. Riley has placed deeds for the property in the hands of Harry Eitel, who looks after his business affairs, to be delivered to the School Board.

EAMES A BRIDE TO-DAY

PARIS, July 12.—Mme. Eames was married to Emilio De Gogorza, the baritone, at noon to-day in the Mayor's office in the Rue d'Anjou.

The couple will go to Germany for a month's honeymoon. Then they will begin a concert tour.

The Attorney-General of France granted them a special dispensation from the law requiring banns to be posted at the Mayor's office ten days before the ceremony.

Still more remarkable, the Pope granted a special dispensation permitting Mme. Eames, a Protestant, to be married in a Roman Catholic church.

So anxious is Mme. Eames to comply with religious forms that the civil ceremony will be followed by a religious ceremony on Thursday. The religious ceremony will take place at 10:30 o'clock in the morning at the Church of St. Pierre du Chaillet.

The wedding was performed with frenzied haste an hour and a half before the time appointed. This was accentuated by the fact that this was the first day upon which it was legally possible for Gogorza to marry, as his divorce from Elsa Neumegen, which was granted by the department of the Seine, was not registered until to-day, just before the wedding.

The witnesses at the ceremony were George Armstrong, an American banker; Ernest Arnal, a lawyer, William Warden, an American painter, and Blaise Fairchild, a composer.

Mme. Eames and De Gogorza have been betrothed for more than two years. During that time they have found the paths of love rocky. Every legal difficulty was put in the way of their marriage by Mrs. Elsa Neumann De Gogorza, who accused Mme. Eames of having won away her husband's love. In the Spring of 1909 Mrs. Gogorza sued for a limited divorce, naming Mme. Eames as "psychic correspondent." Mrs. Gogorza frankly admitted that the character of both diva and baritone was unimpeachable. In her separation suit there was no suggestion of misconduct. Her side of the affair was told in an affidavit sworn to by her mother, Mrs. Neumeogen.

REAL TRAGEDY IS RECORDED BY FILM

NEW YORK, July 12.—A real tragedy was recorded on the film of a moving picture machine here. As Albert Breyton, actor and expert swimmer and diver, leaped from a boat on a Staten Island pond the machine was set in operation to record his aquatic feats. Its lens focused on the bobbling surface of the water where he dived. The moments passed and the widening circles from the impact of his dive touched shores.

The diver's last feat had been caught on the film.

CAPITAL RECORDS SEVERE EARTHQUAKE

WASHINGTON, July 12.—The seismograph at Georgetown University recorded seven earthquake shocks between 11:27 last night and 1:18 to-day. The greatest disturbance was at 12:20 a. m. The location was from north to south. It is the opinion of the Georgetown professors that the centre of the disturbance was not within the limits of North or South America.

GOING RIGHT BACK TO THE EQUATOR TO GET COOLED OFF

"I'm going right back to Africa, to the Congo Free State on the Equator, where I can find some cool weather. I have been here twelve years and never felt any heat like this," said Rev. Dr. Royal J. Dye, a missionary to Africa, when he arrived in Boston to-day on the Red Star liner Menominee, three days overdue from Antwerp.

TEMPERATURES.

1 p. m.	95
2 p. m.	96

To-day's continuation of the heat wave will be followed by a cooler spell to-night and to-morrow, according to the local forecast.

A slight earnest of this promise was found in the temperatures to-day. At 11 a. m. the Boston official temperature was 93 degrees, three degrees cooler than at the same hour yesterday.

But it was much hotter in the sun-baked streets of course, than the official mercury registered on top of the Federal Building.

The forecast for Boston and vicinity: "Fair and cooler to-night and Thursday; moderate west to northwest winds."

The death list continued to-day. South Framingham had its first fatality from the heat. There was one death in Salem and another in Peabody. The Salem death was that of John P. Downing, seventy years old, for thirty-five years paying teller in the United States sub-treasury in this city.

Temperatures to-morrow are expected to be from ten to fifteen degrees cooler than to-day.

At 8 a. m. to-day Boston was 88, making it again the hottest weather station in the country. Other temperatures at that hour included: St. Paul 60, Omaha 68, Kansas City 72, Chicago 72, St. Louis 74.

The first fatality reported was from South Framingham. Charles Smith of Boston, working as assistant chef at the

HOUSE OVERRIDES TWO FOSS VETOES

In the House of Representatives to-day two bills were passed over the Governor's veto, receiving the necessary two-thirds majority. By a vote of 148 to 53 the House passed the bill to establish minimum annual salaries for the Judge and Register of Probate and Insolvency of Barnstable County. The bill establishes a minimum salary of $1,800 for the Judge and $1,600 for the Register. By a vote of 163 to 36 the House also overrode Governor Foss's veto on the bill providing for pensioning the State police. This was the bill that was vetoed by Governor Draper last year, his veto being sustained by the House at that time. The Senate yesterday overrode two vetoes. Thus four out of the six vetoes sent in yesterday have been overridden.

FRUIT MEN OFF ON ANNUAL FIELD DAY

Jolly little parties composed of members of the Boston Fruit and Produce Exchange and their friends left Boston on the Rowe's wharf ferry at various hours to-day, all bound for the Lynnway Club at the Point of Pines for their annual outing. An attractive program was arranged by the committee, Jesse S. Newcomb, William E. Pierce, Frank E. Chenery, Edward H. Kingman and Harry T. Gerrish.

WHITE SOX PARK, Chicago, July 12.—The Boston Red Sox hooked up with the local Sox this afternoon in the second double-header of the six-game series here. Both clubs were anxious to win both games, for a double victory for either meant a rise in the standing.

Manager Donovan used his best bet, Joe Wood, yesterday, and Joe was beaten. The Chicagoans were tickled to death over that fact and said they would go on and take the rest of the series now that they had disposed of the speedy Kansan. But the Red Sox thought they still had pitchers capable of taking falls out of Boyle's men.

A big mid-week crowd was out to see the pastiming to-day. Boston is always a good drawing card here, and the Windy Side fans are enthusiastic over the Chicago team, now that White and Lange are back in winning form.

SEEK DAUGHTERS OF ISAAC GREENBERG

Isaac Greenberg, a tailor who died on June 27 last in the Leo N. Levi Memorial Hospital in Hot Springs, Arkansas, was supposed to have lived at No. 146 Brighton street, Boston, but no one in that neighborhood remembers him. Superintendent Max Mitchell of the Federated Jewish Charities is trying to locate his two young daughters, and he wants them to communicate with him. Greenberg was sixty-one years old.

FEAR 500 DEAD IN FOREST FIRE

DETROIT, July 12.—Dispatches received up to noon to-day indicate that fully 500 persons may have lost their lives in the fire sweeping over Northern Michigan. Every report adds to the horror of the holocaust. Millersburg and Larocque, villages between Alpena and Cheboygan, have been razed. Mets, Posen and Polaski are surrounded by flames.

3 HOUSES DESTROYED BY FLAMES

A fire that necessitated three alarms, burned three buildings to the ground, badly damaged two others and set fire to half a dozen additional structures, threw a large section of Dorchester in the neighborhood of Columbia road and Franklin Park, into a panic to-day and did damage that was estimated at $30,000.

Men and women turned fire fighters, utilizing their garden hose to great advantage. The firemen said that if they had not been assisted by this auxiliary work probably a dozen buildings would have been reduced to ashes before they would have been able to check the flames.

Because of the fact that the buildings burned were flimsy powder houses there was many thrilling escapes. Women ran from the burning structures with children in their arms and hugging furniture that in some instances was of such little value as to make their act ludicrous.

E. M. Gallagher a Hero.

While the blaze was at its height and a great crowd of people had gathered on Beaver street, a team of horses attached to Engine 18 bolted and dashed madly along the street. While many persons were endangered, no one was hurt. The horses crashed into a fence and came to a stop.

The fire was caused by the overturning of a plumber's torch in the almost completed structure at No. 237 Normandy street, it was reported.

The blaze was discovered by Edwin M. Gallagher, chairman of the Board of Pauper Institutions of Boston, who lives at No. 82 Columbia road, and whose house also caught fire. Mr. Gallagher proved himself a hero at this fire, as he did at the big Dover street fire. At the latter fire his work resulted in the city presenting him with a gold medal.

$5,000 TO SOLVE 'RUBBER MILES'

The Railroad Commission reported to-day that it would cost $5,000 to find out whether President Charles S. Mellen of the New York, New Haven & Hartford and of the Boston & Maine was justified in adding so-called "rubber miles" to the latter system. A few weeks ago the Boston & Maine passenger tariff was increased between various points. Explanation was made that the distances were found to be longer in some cases than the old mileage tables said, also that charge was being made for fractions of a mile. The report of the commission to-day was that it would cost $5,000 to resurvey the Boston & Maine lines.

FOSS PARDONS LIFE PRISONER

John Mackie was released from Charlestown State Prison this afternoon upon a pardon from Governor Foss, which has been approved by the Executive Council. He was a life prisoner and committed to the Institution on April 23, 1894, for second degree murder of Mrs. Mercy L. Randall in the South End on November 21, 1893.

He had been a model prisoner for a little more than seventeen years. He has an aged mother who needs his support and a sister who is a well-known singer and artists' model. She resides on Massachusetts avenue.

Among those who sought to have Mackie pardoned, none worked harder than Dennis D. Driscoll, secretary and treasurer of the American Federation of Labor's shoe branch. It is said that mackie is innocent of the homicide which led to his being put behind the bars for life, and that after he stood at the bar for sentence facts came to light which would have cleared him of such a serious charge if known at the time. He is now forty years old. He will get work, it is said, and take care of his mother in her declining years.

TO-DAY'S CABLE NEWS
Up to Midnight London Time

British Anthem Is Changed by the King.

LONDON—A change has been made in the English National Anthem. One of the old verses of the anthem is said to have struck at the King as sounding a somewhat discordant note. It ran:

O Lord our God arise,
Scatter his enemies,
And make them fall;
Confound their politics,
Frustrate their knavish tricks,
On him our hopes we fix,
O save us all.

This verse has now been replaced by the following, written by Dean Hole, and approved by the King, and breathing a more peaceful spirit:

O Lord our God arise,
Scatter his enemies,
Make wars to cease;
Keep us from slaughter and dearth,
Thou Thou our woes to smith.
And over all the earth
Let there be peace.

Remarkable Skin Grafting.

LONDON—What is perhaps the biggest skin grafting case on record has resulted in the restoration to health of the wife of a farmer of the name of Hawkey, after many years of suffering from burns. Twenty relatives vied with one another in contributing a portion of their skins. Two hundred pieces have been grafted from time to time upon her body from parents, husband, sisters, brothers, uncles, cousins and others.

Gladstone Praises America.

LONDON—William Glynne Charles Gladstone, grandson of the great statesman, received a public welcome at Hawarden on his return from Washington. An address was presented on behalf of the tenantry and villagers. Mr. Gladstone said it would be hard to find people superior to the American people in hospitality and kindness.

Crippen's Lawyer Suspended.

LONDON—Arthur Newton, the barrister who defended Dr. H. H. Crippen, the American physician hanged for the murder of his wife, Belle Elmore, to-day was suspended from practice for abetting the publication of a bogus letter purporting to have been written by Crippen while he was in jail.

$2,000,000 Donation by Pope.

ROME—The official report of the Pope's assistance to Messina shows that about $2,000,000 was donated. There were built 215 churches, 178 houses, twenty-six colleges and six monasteries. There was distributed $1,000,000 to survivors.

Morgan's New Gainsborough.

LONDON—J. Pierpont Morgan has added another famous painting to his collection. This is Gainsborough's portrait of Miss Linton, known as "the Beauty of Bath."

LONDON—The Duchess of Marlborough says there is no truth in the rumor that she planned to either buy or rent a house in Washington, or that she intended to go to America soon.

TAKES $3,500 IN SWORDFISH

The largest catch of swordfish ever brought to Boston, with one exception, was landed at T wharf to-day, when the fishing schooner Valentina arrived with 180 fish averaging 250 pounds. The value of the cargo was about $3,500.

Six years ago the schooner Mary I. Mesquita docked with 282 fish. The latter boat, however, had been out for six weeks while the Valentina was out only two weeks at the fishing banks off the South Shoal Lightship.

Captain O'Neil reported some narrow escapes for his men in the dories as well as aboard the ship. Frank Perry was seated in the pulpit of the ship, from which point the fish are harpooned, when a swordfish weighing only 140 pounds, on being harpooned, shot up from the water and sent its sword through the pulpit planking, a distance of twelve feet from the water. The sword was broken off, leaving two feet of it protruding through the planking.

Weak Backs Made Strong

Backache in most cases is kidney ache and usually accompanied by irregularities of the urine. To remove the pain and weakness you must cure the kidneys. Do so with Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. George L. Nott, 69 North Street, Quincy, Mass., says: "I was troubled a great deal by headaches and dizzy spells and frequently had to grasp something to keep from falling. My sight was affected and spots often appeared before me. My back also caused me great suffering. Hearing of Doan's Kidney Pills, I began their use, and after I had taken the contents of five boxes I was permanently cured."

KING AND QUEEN LEAVE IRELAND

DUBLIN, July 12.—Heavy police guards were thrown about an anti-Irish home rule demonstration, made by one hundred Orangemen here to-day, on the occasion of the departure of King George and Queen Mary from Ireland. A great crowd gathered to listen to the orators, but the police precautions prevented an outbreak, although many bitter imprecations were hurled at the speakers. Blazing hot weather marked the day of the departure of the King and Queen, after the most successful royal visit ever made to Ireland.

THIRTEEN DEATHS FROM HEAT IN NEW YORK EARLY TO-DAY

NEW YORK, July 12.—Thirteen persons died of the heat in Greater New York to-day before 6 o'clock a. m. The street temperature at that hour was eighty-two degrees, two degrees higher than on any other day at the same hour during the present record-breaking heat wave.

Relief was promised by the local forecaster, however, in the form of showers and falling temperature. The humidity early to-day was excessive. Just before 7 o'clock rain began to fall, promising relief.

CITY GIVES MORE MILK FOR BABIES

The Board of Health started this afternoon to distribute 2,800 half-pint bottles of free milk for babies in the poor districts. The milk was donated by A. J. Grausteln. To-day was the second one of the free delivery.

The Board of Health announced the following stations for free distribution of milk for babies: East Boston—Maverick Square. South Boston—Dorchester avenue and Broadway. North End—North Bennet and Hanover streets. South End—Washington and Dover streets, Roxbury—Roxbury Crossing and Dudley and Hampden streets. Charlestown—City Square.

The Board of Health sent out men to investigate conditions in many localities. They reported no great change in the milk situation. In some instances conditions have not improved at all.

Dorchester is the victim of Fields Corner, along Dudley and adjoining streets, where many small stores are found. There was little milk, but what supply was obtained early in the morning soon gave out.

Many of the poorer families in this section have been using condensed milk for some time.

The Boston AMERICAN representative in calling upon many families on Duncan street, found them without milk, though a pint or so had been received early in the morning.

Weak Tea Instead Of Milk.

Many children have been given in this section as in other places weak tea with condensed milk. This has been forced upon many mothers, who have been unable to get more than a pint of milk at one time.

People who could get milk have given it to those on the other street who have young babies, but have been unable to obtain it at any price.

Many cases of suffering from lack of milk are found on Klnsiell street.

J. Dempsey of No. 1362 Dorchester avenue, who has been receiving his usual quantity of milk, said: "I never saw so many people after milk. Why I had a milkman offer me sixty cents for four quarts of milk. He said that he wanted it for a sick customer, but could not get any for him on account of the scarcity. I have tried to keep the babies supplied, but so many have come here to my store after milk that I have had a hard time to supplyive my regular customers."

Over in Roxbury on Station street along Minden street there has been much suffering for the want of milk.

Mrs. Margaret Daniels, of No. 25 Station street, said: "I have had little milk for my baby. I could not get it anywhere for several days. The stores did not have it. I got some from a few neighbors, but I would like more. I can get along myself but when my baby cries for milk, I do not know what to do. Sweetened water does not do any good. It does not satisfy."

Deny Price Is Raised.

Mrs. Mary Grote, No. 37 Station street, said: "I have given up using fresh milk. You get so tired running around for it in the morning, waiting at the stores, that I am going to use canned milk. I got so that I like it. I have no baby now, and I am single and I can do with this."

W. M. Brown, manager of H. P. Hood Sons Company, denies that his firm has raised the price of milk. He stated to the AMERICAN: "We have not raised the price of milk since April of this year, when we made the price eight cents a quart."

The report that Hood's laboratory on Broadway has raised the price is untrue. It remains the same there, eight cents a quart. H. P. Hood Sons Company wished the AMERICAN to deny that they have advanced the price of milk.

Giving Away Milk for Poor Babies

This scene at North Bennet and Hanover streets was repeated by the city in four other sections of the city. Two thousand half-pint bottles of milk were distributed under the direction of policemen to help save the babies' lives.

WIDOW ACCUSES THE NEW HAVEN

The wreck of the Federal Express from Washington to Boston, with its twelve hailed, forty-seven injured, and loss of thousands of dollars' worth of rolling stock when it plunged from a viaduct at Bridgeport, all of which is blamed on Engineer J. M. Curtis by the New Haven Company in an official statement, is declared by Curtis's widow to have been caused by overwork and heat exhaustion.

Mrs. Curtis made this statement to an AMERICAN reporter in New York to-day as she comforted her three fatherless children she said:

"It was overwork that killed my poor husband. For eight months my brother and husband ran a switch engine for all the freight yards in the Bronx. You both have had light work in the heat of such a day as Monday. He came home to me and the children all played out, and we just rested about the house in the early evening, gasping for some fresh air, like almost every one else did.

"Along about nine o'clock that night the call came for Arthur to resume his duty as the engineer to the Federal Express, which was to leave at eleven that night. Tired as he was, the poor fellow started up at once, for that call meant some extra money for us, and we needed the money.

Had Been Sick Recently.

"My husband had just recovered from a three weeks' illness. He was sick with the measles and we were quarantined. Our income was cut off and we used up our savings. My husband, although employed by the New Haven for more than thirteen years, eleven of them as an engineer, never got a regular run. He was for seven years next on the 'spare' list.

"He was always very careful, and occasionally he has taken the Federal Express out before. I am sure he knew every turn in the road, and I cannot understand how he could do wrong, unless the tired feeling was too much for him. He had complained during the evening of being very weak from the extreme heat of Monday.

A clerk sent by the railroad company to notify Mrs. Curtis of the death of her husband merely told her that there had been a wreck. She wandered around for two hours seeking word from her husband before a kind trainman took her aside and told her the truth. She collapsed and was taken home.

Hunt for More Bodies.

The wreckers resumed work to-day on the two Pullmans and the day coach which were still piled in a heap beside the tracks. It was the belief that one and perhaps more bodies might be found in these cars.

At the Bridgeport Hospital it was stated that Miss Loretta McCraken of Philadelphia and Mrs. Lois Hartman of Newfield, N. Y., were the only ones who were considered to be in a critical condition. Miss McCraken is suffering from internal injuries and Mrs. Hartman from shock.

MORE POLICE FOR L STREET

More police protection will be afforded eathers at L street as a result of a protest made to-day to Acting Mayor Collins by a committee representing the Young Men's Hebrew Association.

The committee, consisting of William J. Schell, Nathan S. Sodelson, Joseph Burkowitz and Dr. Nathan A. Finkelstein, told the acting mayor that their race was being discriminated against and that they were made the object of ridicule and scorn while enjoying the advantages of the bathhouse. Moreover, several had been accorded rough treatment while in the water.

Chairman Richard M. Walsh of the Bath Trustees attended the conference and assured the delegation that he would take every precaution to prevent a repitition of the scenes described.

"Rowdyism must stop at L street," said the Acting Mayor after the conference. "Such actions ar un-American and unjust, besides being a disgrace to the city. I don't care whether a man is a taxpayer or not. He shall have fair treatment. I have asked Police Commissioner O'Meara to detail special officers to the bath house."

TEACHERS' BILL GOES TO FOSS

The teachers' compromise salary increase bill was passed to be engrossed in the House, with a voice vote and without debate to-day. It now goes to the Governor.

Under the provisions of this bill 10 cents will be added to the tax levy of the city of Boston in 1912, 20 cents in 1913 and 25 cents every following year.

The measure has been agreed to by the teachers in the elementary grades, the school committee, and all others concerned in its passage. It is thought that the Governor will sign the bill in its present form.

Some People Are "Sale Shy"

They have come to distrust many so-called "sales"—and not without reason. But when a great store like this—pledged to carry no goods over to another season—marks down its entire stock of thousands of carefully selected, all wool, splendidly tailored suits, it results in price-reductions that would otherwise never be known and affords an opportunity for every economical man to pick out whatever he needs to wear at a big and actual saving of real money. If you don't know what sort of a store this is—ask any man who has bought here.

ATWOOD OFFERS TAFT AN AEROPLANE FLIGHT

WASHINGTON, July 12.—President Taft received Aviator Harry N. Atwood at the White House to-day. Atwood offered to take the President aloft in his aeroplane, but the latter declined. Thomas Atwood promised to attend to the balancing by putting the President in the middle of the machine. Atwood said he would fly over Washington Friday. He also announced that he would attempt to fly from this city to Chicago at some later date.

MRS. COLT MAY NOT FILE SUIT

NEW YORK, July 12.—It was learned to-day on good authority that Miss Ethel Barrymore will not sue Russell G. Colt, her husband, for absolute divorce, because her religion blocks any such step. She may begin proceedings for a separation, but reports to-day were to the effect that Miss Barrymore's brother, Jack Barrymore, and her uncle, John Drew, are working vigorously for a reconciliation and may succeed in bringing the couple together again. Miss Barrymore is a devout Roman Catholic. She was baptized in the Catholic church, was educated in the Sacred Heart Convent in Philadelphia, and her religion sternly forbids a divorce.

Mr. Colt is not a Catholic, but a special dispensation was obtained for the ceremony uniting them, which was performed in the Catholic church. Therefore, the church would not under any circumstances consent to the complete severing of their marriage tie.

It was stated at the offices of Dittenhoofer, Gerver and James, her lawyers, that no papers had been received from Miss Barrymore. Furthermore, they have declared that Tom Jer so authorized that she desired to begin her action. Mr. Gerver explains that he has represented Miss Barrymore in other matters, and that his connection with this case has resulted from his being legal adviser to Ina Claire Drohman, Miss Barrymore's manager.

On Thursday the truth will possibly know definitely what action, if any, will be taken. Meantime, Miss Barrymore is said to be making up her mind.

Friends of the actress assert that she still loves Mr. Colt, and friends of Mr. Colt declare that he is as fond as ever of his wife and that when he has dined out evenings he has shown his guests her picture and that of his baby, admiringly. Mr. Colt desires that any disagreement be settled, and is more than willing to meet his charming wife half way. His last meeting with her was amicable. He bade her goodbye most affectionately when he put her on the train for her Western trip, and up to several weeks ago the couple exchanged a profusion of telegrams and letters.

Mr. Colt himself expects that there will be no trouble. He is preparing the Newmonech home for her return, as the couple agreed it until the end of August, during her trip. The two-year-old son is in the East with his father and no word has yet come requesting that the child be taken to its mother. Miss Barrymore herself will return East the first week in August, her season ending in Spokane on July 28.

Both John Drew, her uncle, and Jack Barrymore, her favorite brother, are anxious to effect a reconciliation and have wired to Miss Barrymore to reconsider her action. Assuring her that certain rumors which have reached her concerning Mr. Colt are utterly unfounded.

How to Cure Corns

Home Treatment for Foot Troubles Brings Instant Relief.

The continued irritating effects of sore feet sometimes involve the whole nervous system, developing nervous disorders. A trouble of this kind should never be neglected. One of the most effective treatments known to science is the following: "Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of Calocide compound in a basin of hot water; soak the feet in this for full fifteen minutes, gently massaging the sore parts. (Less time will not give the desired results.) Repeat this each night until the cure is permanent." The effect will be a revelation. The pain goes instantly and the feet feel so good you could sing with joy. Corns and callouses can be peeled right off. Bunions are reduced to normal and inflammation down. Sweaty and smelly feet, swollen and tender feet need but a few treatments. Calocide was formerly confined to professional use, but can now be bought by the general public. Any druggist has it in stock or will quickly get it from his wholesale house. A twenty-five cent package is said to be sufficient to cure the worst feet.

by the heat and excitement during the fire. They were:

Mrs. A. S. Wire, fifty years old, No. 335 Baxter street.

Mrs. Jacob Axe, No. 339 Sawyer street.

Mrs. Jennie Walsh, forty-five, of Chelsea.

Ada Calish, thirteen, of No. 32 Dumont street.

Mrs. Wire was ill in bed at her home when the fire started. Fearing that her home would be burned neighbors took her out of bed and were carrying her to a neighbors, when she collapsed.

Those who were overcome were taken to a spot in the back of the Cullis Consumptives' hospital in the shade of trees and Dr. S. R. Sylvester of the hospital arrived accompanied by a nurse, Mary Farlinger, who attended them.

Mrs. Walsh of Chelsea was on her way to work at a home in the neighborhood when she became so excited that she fainted.

Sparks from the fire dropped on the roof of St. Mark's Episcopal Church, and the Rev. Francis Bullard and senior warden, G. W. Varney kept up a hose and soaked the church wet down with a garden hose.

Mrs. William Newcomb was partially overcome by smoke when she went back into her home to get a valuable. She was taken out of the house by Morris Cohen of No. 332 Sawyer street and Benjamin Gorshuke of No. 3 Walcott street.

Women and girls without the neighborhood protected their homes from the flying embers by the use of garden hose. Their work saved more than one home from destruction.

The fire method smoke coming from a house on Normandy street, and while we were wondering where the fire was it dropped on our roof and our house was afire. We had barely time to get out, but all happened so quickly."

On the second floor was Mr. and Mrs. Jonas Klein and their five children, Arthur David, Grace, Joseph and Mathilda. The top floor was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Morris Axe and their two sons, William and Joseph. They also had to vacate their houses in a hurry.

The house at No. 296 Normandy street was occupied on the first floor by Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Doyle and their daughter, Miss Gertrude V. Doyle.

"I was just smoking breakfast when Gertrude called my attention to smoke in an unflushed house across the way," said Mrs. Doyle. "We found it all afire. The firemen came and told us to get out just as quickly as we could. It was only a minute later when our house was in flames.

The second floor of this house was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Barrows and their daughter, Susan.

Fire Spread Rapidly.

Edward M. Gallagher said: "I was looking out of the window of my house and saw the flames. I was about to go in town to my work. With incredible speed the blaze enveloped the entire house and spread to the adjoining structure. I ran to a box and turned in the alarm.

"Within a few moments the fire commenced attacking my house. I turned my attention to saving my own property. The terrible heat of the past few weeks made the wooden structures resemble tinder boxes."

The three-flat structure at No. 257 Normandy street was unoccupied. It was burned to the ground before the firemen had a chance to make but very little effort to check the flames. This building, like one as well as the one next to it, No. 259, was owned by W. H. Newcomb. No. 259 was in flames almost as soon as the one in which the fire originated. The flames burst through these buildings as though they had been great piles of shavings, the intense heat of the last few days making of the structures veritable tinder boxes.

Mr. Newcomb himself occupied No. 259. On the second floor of this building was a family named Paine. Both families made their escape in safety, but the rapidity with which the fire swept through the building caused them to get out before they were able to save any of their property.

The three-apartment house of No. 253 Normandy street, also owned by Mr. Newcomb, was burned to the ground. Another building, No. 330, at the corner of Sawyer and Normandy streets, was badly damaged.

This building was occupied by families named Brown, Klein and Axe.

The house at No. 262 is occupied by the families of D. L. Marshall, John Brennan and a man named O'Connor.

W. H. Newcomb, the owner of several of the houses burned, said that the plumbers had said that the fire was set from an overturned torch. He said he had heard that the fire started on the second floor and it was thought it might have started from some one tossing a lighted match into a pile of shavings.

Scores Fire Fighters.

John Keene of No. 46 Columbia road, who recently married a niece of Mayor Fitzgerald, and whose house was saved from burning through the heroic work of their maid, Mrs. Maud Murray, criticized the fire department for arriving late and declared that if Dorchester would be burned to the ground some day unless the city decided to require non-combustible material for the roofing of two and three-flat structures, instead of shingles.

INCOME TAX IS AGAIN REFUSED

By an overwhelming vote, the House of Representatives today refused to reconsider its action of yesterday, when it refused to take up Governor Foss's resolution for a State income tax during the present session, and referred it to the next General Court. This action was taken after an hour's deliberation and a roll-call was refused, so that the only possible manner now open for bringing the matter before the House this session is for Governor Foss to issue a special message urging action in the matter, and even then the House may still cling to its present stand and refuse reconsideration.

It is said that the Governor is determined to have some action taken in the matter of taxation reforms this session, and certain persons very intimate with the Governor say that he declares he will keep the Legislature in session until some definite action is taken in the matter.

Led by Democrats.

The opposition to the motion for reconsideration today was headed by the leading Democrats of the House, the debate being lead by Representatives Lomasney of Boston, Meaney of Blackstone and Reidy of Boston. Their reasons for opposing the reconsideration of yesterday was to the effect that the matter of a State income tax was too important and serious an affair to decide hastily and it was one that, late in the session to give the resolution the proper amount of thought and consideration that it deserves.

The Senate yesterday agreed to consider the resolution by a unanimous vote of 28 to 0, and the matter was then passed on to the House, which body turned it down for the present session.

A number of persons on the Hill claim that Speaker Walker is greatly to blame for the refusal to take action on the Governor's resolution this year. Speaker Walker has a resolution of his own which provides for a tax on all income no matter from what source derived. Yesterday he took the floor in behalf of his own resolution against that offered by Governor Foss.

Indorsed by Business Men.

Governor Foss's resolution provides for an amendment to the State Constitution to permit the Legislature to levy an income tax on all property, the incomes from which are not already taxed. This resolution has been indorsed by the Boston Chamber of Commerce and business organizations of importance and influence through the State, as well as in Boston.

Representatives Wood and Crane of Canbridge and Brackett of Arlington, all strong Republicans, were for reconsideration of yesterday's action, but the opposition proved too strong for them.

REPORT OF GERMAN FLEET STIR LONDON

LONDON, July 12.—Excitement over the Moroccan situation flamed up anew today when a dispatch from Cadiz to the effect that eight German warships are now manoeuvering in Moroccan waters was made public. It is predicted in well-informed quarters that one of the vessels in British England will immediately join with France in protesting to the German government against this demonstration in force at so critical a period in the northern African situation.

BOSTON PARTY AT FRANKFORT

FRANKFORT, Germany, July 12.—The old western harbor of Frankfort and the new eastern harbor on the river Main were inspected this afternoon by the Boston Chamber of Commerce party, which arrived in Frankfort last evening. The layout of this city is of particular interest to the American visitors because in connection with the harbor is a large industrial region, similar in plan to that which the Boston Chamber of Commerce has advocated for Boston.

This region consists of over 500 acres, laid off by the city for factory sites, with elaborate railway connections and sidings. The harbor and industrial development were paid for by the excess condemnation of land, and furnish probably the best example of a detached complete industrial development in Germany. They have made Frankfort a commercial and industrial city of first importance. Its exports to the United States alone amount nearly to $100,000 annually, consisting chiefly of articles of domestic manufacture.

Party Specially Honored.

Immediately upon the arrival of the party last evening a reception and dinner was given by the Mayor of the city and the Frankfort Chamber of Commerce. The latter is a brilliant affair, held in the Kaiserhall room, in which until 1807 the German kings were crowned. No foreign delegates have ever previously been dined in this historic hall.

This morning a trip was made around the old mediaeval city centre, which has been preserved. Following this, the party inspected the newer city and the suburban developments, the planning of which are unique.

Frankfort originated the "taxation of unearned increment of land value" which has spread all over Europe. It has a large exposition building to promote the city, a model garden, commercial high school, and a beautiful suburban railway system. It is one of the loftiest cities in the world in municipal undertakings.

Luncheon was served at noon by the Hartfordkummer, and the party started immediately for its inspection of the harbor. It will leave at 8.45 this evening for Hamburg.

Trip Up the Rhine.

Yesterday the Boston party had its first relaxation from the serious study of harbors, docks, transit facilities, civic, municipal and industrial improvements and other economic subjects to which it has been giving its attention since leaving at Liverpool June 25.

A trip up the Rhine occupied the entire day. The party left Dusseldorf at 8.6 in the morning, making a short stop at Cologne to visit the Cathedral, which is probably the most magnificent gothic edifice in the world, proceeded to Coblenz, where the boat was taken for a trip through the most picturesque portion of the Rhine.

The party landed at Bingen shortly after 6 o'clock and came by train to Frankfort.

F. J. McIsaac of the Boston AMERICAN staff, who is with the Boston Chamber of Commerce party abroad, will have a page in next Sunday's AMERICAN full of the most interesting detail of the trip made by the Boston party.

FOXBORO TRUSTEES EXPLAIN TO FOSS

Trustees of the Foxboro State Hospital have written Governor Foss taking exception to his message to the Legislature stating that the $100,000 asked for the institution as a special appropriation is extravagant. He also opposed spending $17,000 to maintain two remodelled farm buildings, saying that they represent a cost of $600 per capita per year to maintain each of fifty-three patients. Yesterday the trustees say the $100,000 is not asked for as a special appropriation, but as an original one for building a new hospital, and that the $17,000 is asked for to operate farming lands upon the 1,000-acre tract of the new hospital at Norfolk.

ASKED WHITING TO HEAD NEW COMPANY

How Henry M. Whitney was offered the presidency of the North American Rubber Company, but refused to take it, came out to-day in the testimony of Newell W. Bliss, formerly a director in the company, a witness for the prosecution in the case of the government against Stillman B. Shaw and Warren Wheeler of the charge of using the mails in a scheme to defraud. The continued hearing in this case was resumed before United States Commissioner Hayes. The witness identified a letter he wrote to Henry M. Whitney on October 21, 1909, asking him to accept the presidency of the company, on the idea that his holding the office would bring a larger clientele to the concern. Mr. Whitney refused to be interested in the proposition.

MISS SALLIE THAYER BRIDE OF FREDERIC WINTHROP TO-DAY

Unlike the brilliant weddings of her two sisters, the marriage of Miss Sallie Thayer and Frederick Winthrop, which took place at the bride's Summer home at Lancaster this afternoon, was an extremely quiet home affair.

Miss Thayer, who is a sister of the Countess Moltke, wife of the Danish minister to Washington, and of Mrs William S. Patten of New York, has been a very prominent member of the Vincent Club, and one of Boston's best known and most beautiful society girls.

Mr. Winthrop is a Harvard man, class of 1891, and is a member of the Somerset Club, Tennis and Racquet Club, the Myopia Hunt Club at Hamilton, also the Knickerbocker and other New York clubs. Mr. Winthrop is a widower, his first wife having been Miss Heath from her home and killed in 1907.

Mr. Thayers are still in mourning for the bride's father, Nathaniel Thayer, who died last March, and for this reason only the immediate families were invited to attend the ceremony, which was performed by Dr. Peterson, pastor of the Unitarian Church of Lancaster. The bride wore white satin and was attended by two flower girls, her little nieces, Nancy and Jean Patten.

The bride and groom leave for their wedding trip to-morrow night, but their first destination is kept a secret. They will visit Europe before settling down for the Winter in Mr. Winthrop's Boston home on Beacon street. Mr. Winthrop also has a Summer home in Hamilton, in his college days, he was very prominent in Harvard athletics, especially rowing, and was a member of the varsity crew.

Miss Thayer, in addition to being an heiress to the Thayer millions, has the right position of being one of the most beautiful women, not only in Boston, but in the whole country. She is Summer queen in the Thayer villa. There is another side to Miss Thayer's make-up, and that is her social and courted society girl, as the little slick children in Back Bay Boston well know. Miss Thayer has been a frequent visitor here, and has many staunch friends among the youngsters, who remember her with ring candies and her charming way of telling stories.

RECLUSE DEAD, LEAVES $50,000

Presumably a victim of the heat of the past couple of days, Alexander Gastinel, a unique character of Cambridge for many years, was found dead in his home, a shabby room over a stable at No. 124 Hampshire street, Cambridge, early to-day. The story as believed, left behind him an estate valued at $50,000, saved from the earnings of his trade of harness maker.

He was about sixty years old and had lived the life of a recluse, keeping always to himself and living very frugally. He was employed as a harnessmaker with the Cambridge Ice Company, and for a number of years he only drank at home. It was the little break on the second floor of the stable on Hampshire street, one of the properties of the ice company.

Mr. Gastinel's health seemed to fail recently, but the heat seemed to be responsible for his death. He was found lying on his bed to-day, evidently having died to-day seated in a chair in his room.

NATIONAL SHOE EXHIBIT OPENS

National Shoe and Leather Week" for the benefit of the retailers throughout the country opened in Boston this afternoon when the Fifth National Shoe and Leather Fair opened in Mechanics Building. It is estimated that the opening was attended by at least 1,000 men engaged in shoe and leather industries or kindred lines from distant points as well as from all over the United States. In commercial and industrial circles the market fair is regarded as one of the largest trade events which has taken place in this city for years.

Frederick Adams, manager of the exhibition said it afforded an opportunity for the members of the trade to get together, exchange views and add to their acquaintanceship. He thanked exhibitors for their hearty co-operation and the Board of Trade organization, especially thanked the New England Shoe and Leather Association.

President Charles H. Hurt of that association was another speaker, saying:

"The shoe industry is largely confined to proudly asserting that American men and women wear the best shoes in the world and lead in an greater cost than other peoples. We have a right to be proud of our footwear. With such a record and a reduction of its duty to 20 per cent., the shoe industry is entitled to a reduction of its duty to 20 per cent. in the tariff bill now in conference and we intend that no one in full wages 22 per cent. higher than those of Europe shall lose his job because of the reduction of the duty of only 10 and 15 per cent. in the useless letter of the American valuation law. We intend to stand by our guns as a football of politics and tariff legislation and we intend to win this point. We predict on the free list."

TUG SCRANTON HAS BROKEN PROPELLER

CHATHAM, July 12.—The tug Scranton from Boston and towing seven loaded barges from Boston to Hoboken, was at anchor in this harbor this morning in the Old Saving Station, where she was laid up early to-day when the propeller broke. The tug boat is in no danger and her captain came ashore in a small boat to obtain assistance in the shape of another tug to tow the boats back to Boston, where repairs can be made.

GATES NEAR DEATH, SAYS PARIS REPORT

A WARNING TO MANY

Some Interesting Facts Regarding Health Statistics

Few people realize to what extent their health depends upon the condition of the kidneys.

The physician in nearly all cases of serious illness makes a chemical analysis of the patient's urine, for he knows that unless the kidneys are doing their work properly the other organs cannot be brought back to health and strength.

When the kidneys are neglected or abused in any way, serious results are sure to follow. According to health statistics, Bright's disease, which is really an advanced form of kidney trouble, caused nearly ten thousand deaths in 1910, in the state of New York alone. Therefore, it behooves us to pay more attention to the health of these most important organs.

An ideal herbal compound that has had remarkable success as a kidney remedy is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great Kidney, Liver and Bladder Remedy.

The mild and healing influence of this preparation is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of cures.

If you feel that your kidneys require attention, and wish a sample bottle, write to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Mention this paper and they will gladly forward it to you absolutely free, by mail.

Swamp-Root is sold by every druggist in bottles of two sizes—50c. and $1.00.

TO GROW HAIR ON A BALD HEAD

BY A SPECIALIST

Thousands of people suffer from baldness and falling hair who, having tried nearly every advertised hair tonic and hair-grower without results, have resigned themselves to baldness and its attendant discomfort. Yet their case is not hopeless; the following simple home prescription has made hair grow after years of baldness, and is also unequalled for restoring hair to its original color, stopping hair from falling out, and destroying the dandruff germ. It will not make the hair greasy, and can be put up by any druggist. Bay Rum, 6 ounces; Lavona de Composee, 2 ounces; Menthol Crystals, one-half drachm. If you wish it perfumed, add half to one teaspoonful of Tre Jolon Perfume, which unites perfectly with the other ingredients. This preparation is highly recommended by physicians and specialists, and is absolutely harmless, as it contains none of the poisonous wood alcohol so frequently found in hair tonics. Do not apply to the face or where hair is not desired.

What to Do for Baby in This Hot Weather

There is much you can do to safeguard your baby's health.

Give him a bath in his tub every morning, and a light sponge bath two or three times a day.

Dress him in thin clothing, and change him promptly.

Keep him out of the sun, and whether indoors or out, protect him from flies and mosquitoes.

Be sure that the milk you use for his food is pure and sweet.

If it has turned ever so slightly, do not use it.

You can keep milk sweet for many hours by standing a bottle of it upside down in a pail of cool water, if your ice unexpectedly runs low.

Modify the milk with Ridge's Food. Milk so modified digests easily, nourishes and keeps the bowels regular.

Physicians in all parts of the world are prescribing the Ridge's Food method of modifying milk. It has raised three generations of babies, running up into the millions in number.

If vomiting or looseness appear, look to the milk at once.

Take away all the milk and give Ridge's Food and water alone temporarily.

The return to milk may be made as soon as the trouble disappears.

Boil and cool all the water you give baby to drink.

Do not overfeed.

Keep him as quiet as possible.

Ridge's Food may be had of every druggist.

The small size package costs 25c, the large hospital size only $1.50.

Ridge's Food is very economical.

We will send a sample package free on request.

How Gregg and Alexander Beat Matty's Record

Here are the records of Gregg and Alexander to date and Mathewson's 1901 record up to July 8:

	W.	L.	S.O.	B.B.	Hits	Av.
Gregg	13	3	67	45	99	.812
Alexander	16	4	122	73	134	.800
Mathewson	16	6	101	37	125	.684

NEW PITCHERS ARE WONDERS

The real pitching sensation of the present season is Sylvanus Gregg, alias Vean, Cleveland's young left-hander from the Pacific Coast. This boy, the records show to-day, has shown more class than Mathewson did the first year he was in fast company. Matty's mark up to July 8 in the 1901 season was 16 victories in 22 games, a whopping percentage of .684.

Gregg has now pitched 16 games and has won 13, and lost 3 of them, for a mark of .812. Mathewson's great record is also surpassed by that of Grover Cleveland Alexander, the Philadelphia youngster, who is making such a phenomenal debut in the upper set. Alexander has won 16 games out of 20.

But Alexander is pitching for a team that has been in first place most of the season and is right up among the leaders now. Mathewson's 1901 mark was made with a strong club back of him. These things make Gregg's record all the more astonishing, for his percentage is nearly 100 points better than that of his team. The Naps are over the .500 mark as compared to their star pitcher's .812. He probably wouldn't win at all if he had a real club back of him.

Detroit has won two of the three games in which Gregg has been charged with defeat. The Tigers batted him to 3 terms and the Naps made seven errors behind their pitcher in the two battles. His third and latest defeat was at the hands of the Yankees. There he got only four hits off him, but trimmed him 2 to 1.

While Gregg and Alexander are having better first years than Mathewson did, few expect them to keep up their pace as the Giant wonder has done. King Cole of the Cubs made a wonderful showing last season, but isn't sustaining the clip. Mathewson is in a class by himself as a perennial star.

ALEXANDER TELLS PITCHING AXIOMS

These are some of the things Alexander the great pitcher says I under the weakness of a batter and feed the ball just where he can't hit it.

There isn't much difference between the majors and the "bushes." You get better batting up here and that always encourages a pitcher.

I haven't started to experiment on any mysterious shoot, and never will.

I rely on my fielders curve a great deal when in dangerous spots, and occasionally change my pace.

I have only been playing professional ball three years, and my ambition is that some day I would be in the National League never entered my mind.

I like to pitch, and I always am ready to work when Manager Dooin calls upon me.

I never abuse myself, keep in good condition, and my arm has never failed me.

I don't believe in a pitcher trying to master too many curves. All I have is a drop curve, an overhand curve and a hop to my speedy one.

NEAL BALL A STAR.

Neal Ball, who wasn't good enough for Cleveland last year, is now one of the best men on the team, and likewise one of the best liked by players and fans.

SONDER BOATS ON THE WAY BACK

BUZZARDS BAY, July 12.—The yachtsmen about the bay as well as those on the other side at Marion, especially the admirers and enthusiasts in sonder racing, are anxiously awaiting the return of Robert W. Emmons, 2nd, with the Bibelot and George Dabney with the Beaver, both winners in the German races at Kiel the past month. The Bibelot captured the Emperor William cup, while the Beaver took the Prince Henry trophy.

Both these sonders have sailed in the Beverly and Sippican regattas and the owners are members of the Beverly Yacht Club and prominent Summer people about these shores. It is expected that as soon as they return to this country the boats will be put in the water and rigged ready to take part in the races in local waters the latter part of this month or the first of August.

There will be a big fleet of sonders in local waters soon for the sport is now waxing warm between the several boats now in the game. The past week the Helen, owned by Dwight F. Davis, the former lawn tennis champion, who summers at Marion, has been put in the water. The Peg, Galen F. Stone's sonder, has already put in appearance and the Joyette, J. C. Edwards's new craft, the winner of the King's cup at Marblehead a few years ago, is sailing in the sonder races and joining at times is Colonel Harry F. Converse has sold his sonder, the Bandits, to L. J. Knowles, who will, in all probability, race here soon.

With the return of the Bibelot and Beaver the fleet will be made up of the above, the Scarson, Sallie VIII., Phoebe Martin. Every other week the sonder class is sailed at Beverly Yacht Club and the Sippican at Marion. Up to the present the honors are equally divided between the Joyette, Scarson and Sallie VIII.

SCOUTS SEEK CENTRAL STARS

SOUTH BEND, Ind., July 12.—Notwithstanding the franchise troubles of the Central League, the clubs on the circuit are playing a brilliant article of ball and the gap between the first and second division teams gradually is being lessened. Since the appearance of the torrid wave the South Bend aggregation, holding the championship of 1910, has been pushing toward the top with great speed. On the last road trip the club won seven of the eleven games played in nine days and came home tied with Fort Wayne for third place.

Newark, now stationed for the season, is again playing fine ball and is expected to force its way to the top of the second division within the next five or six days. Dayton continues to win with regularity and clings to first place without any apparent slump approaching. Zanesville, however, is losing its grip on second place and South Bend and Fort Wayne are fighting hard to send the Potters down to fourth place.

The clubs continue to round the ball and the season will see the highest averages established since the circuit was organized nine years ago. Fielding averages, likewise, are suffering.

No less than half a dozen scouts have appeared in Central League territory during the last two weeks, the players being watched being First Baseman Schmick of South Bend, First Baseman Sommerlot of Terre Haute, Third Baseman Kirkpatrick of Dayton and Infielder Wurfl of Evansville. All are these promising players are certain to go up. Cincinnati is watching Kirkpatrick.

Wurfl, the most promising young infielder to develop in the new league this year, will go to Detroit. The fourth is nineteen years old, but he shows a polish that will do in the field and uses the willow like an experienced man.

FRANK MANTELL GETS BEST OF WILLIAMS

NEW YORK, July 12.—The members of Brown's A. A. who braved the heat were more than repaid by the 10-round bout put on by Barney Williams and Frank Mantell.

Williams conceded at least ten pounds in weight, but at that he fought a splendid battle, and only in the sixth round had Mantell in serious distress. His opponent recuperated, however, and not only went through that round but carried the battle to Williams during the remaining rounds. Williams was knocked down in the first round.

WELLS HOPES TO MEET WOLGAST

NEW YORK, July 12.—Despite the announcement from Los Angeles that Ad Wolgast would fight Freddie Welsh on Thanksgiving Day and would not fight anybody before that time, Matt Wells the English lightweight, has not given up hope of making a match with the American lightweight title holder. George McDonald, manager for Wells, announces that he has signed a supplementary agreement with Tom O'Day, representing the Metropolitan Club of San Francisco, for a fight between Wells and Wolgast at San Francisco on Labor Day.

"I feel sure Wolgast will not let this opportunity slip by," said McDonald tonight. "Wells is champion of Great Britain and is here to meet champions. He is holder of the Lonsdale belt, having won it decisively from Freddie Welsh, so that in making a match with Welsh Wolgast is going to fight a man whom Wells has already beaten."

McDonald said that should Wolgast refuse to make the match with Wells, the latter would meet Packy McFarland at Milwaukee on Labor Day.

BALDWIN WANTS A MATCH WITH BROWN

Now that Ad Wolgast has signed with Freddie Welsh there are several lightweights who will give "K. O." Brown a chance to box. Aleck McLean, manager of Matty Baldwin, has sent word to Brown's manager that Brown can have a match with Baldwin at any weight, any time and for any amount.

ALTA M'DONALD, HORSEMAN, DEAD

ALBANY, July 12.—Alta P. MacDonald, known to turfmen all over the country, died at his home in Menands after an illness which confined him to his bed more than seven months. His death was indirectly the result of an injury to his spine, sustained six years ago at a Grand Circuit race meeting in Michigan. For the last four years his lower limbs have been paralyzed, due to his injury.

Mr. MacDonald was born at Hartford, N. Y., on April 22, 1845, the son of a famous horseman, and drove his first race when only seven years old. When fifteen years old he was a public trainer. Among the fastest horses he developed are Major Delmar, 1:59¾, Sweet Marie, 2:02, and Dariel, 2:00¾.

FALL RIVER TRADES REIGER TO LYNN TEAM

FALL RIVER, July 12.—Pitcher Reiger of the Fall River (New England League) baseball team has been traded to Lynn. Fall River receiving in return Pitcher Swearingen and Infielder Callahan of Lynn. Swearingen was immediately sold to the Haverhill club. Fall River's sole object in making the trade being to secure a shortstop.

UMPIRES AND PLAYERS EVEN UP IN BATTLES

By R. W. LARDNER.

Speaking of Roger Bresnahan reminds us that Bill Klem is umpiring here. It will be remembered that Klem was the ump who walloped the Card manager in the face during a recent game with Cincinnati.

Rogey didn't have a chance to get back then. He may take one now, but the odds are against it, for he has had time to cool off and he won't be very anxious to set himself suspended when his team is making such a strong bid for high honors.

It's even up now in the season's series of battles between umpires and players. The umpires led, after Klem's accomplishment, until Sherwood Magee cracked Pfeffer.

It would be interesting to learn the actual truth of that encounter. Reports had it that Sherwood landed on Pfeffer's ear and cracked his lip. We have seen Pfeffer, and can swear that both his ears are far removed from his mouth. President Lynch's investigation may settle the argument.

Baseball is exciting enough without these little sideshows. Besides, they take up too much valuable time.

Kaiser Making a Hit.

The Cards will have something to talk about all the rest of the Summer and all Winter. Even if they fail to finish among the first four, they will be heroes with their immediate families, at least, so they ought not to feel too gloomy about their unpleasant experience.

There is plenty for Rustler bugs to feel cheerful about. If they could overlook the fact that the team is in last place and think only of the nice things, they would be just as well off as the inhabitants of St. Louis.

One cheerful detail is Kaiser's work in left field and at bat. He is a marked man because he was part of the big trade, but he doesn't seem to be shaken by the knowledge that folks have their eyes on him. He is attending to the job better than any of his predecessors.

The best point in bat he is a beginner. When he gets enough experience he will be one of the real outfielders of the game, or will have to do some more wordswallowing.

Real Hopeful Outlook.

Hank Weaver's latest performance is another thing to feel happy over. There was never a doubt that Weaver had in him the makings of a first baseman, but he didn't impress very favorably when he first became a Rustler. However, he has apparently struck his stride once again and is going to be one of the dependables who have been such scarce articles around here this season.

Griffin also looks good, and so does Hub Perdue. If McTigue can get control, the Rustler staff won't be half bad. I'm not sure it will come close to equalling that young corps of Braveshaves.

A great deal was expected of Charley Herzog and Bill Sweeney, but these two have surpassed all expectations. We would never suspect that the latter had spent most of his career in the outfield, as he acts like a man born to the job.

As for Herzy, he is an off day when he doesn't pull off two or three hair-raising stops and throws.

BASEBALL CHATTER

Manager Dooin of the Phillies can be forgiven if he feels a bit sore at Sherwood Magee right now. About one-fifth of the Phillies' strength rests in its regular outfield. As injury put John Titus at the commission and Red just pulled a trade with Cincinnati that gave the Quaker club to help patch up his outer defence.

Dooin's down for a long suspension and Walsh will have to be used in left, leaving the Quakers without a capable utility man of any kind. Furthermore, Magee is Philadelphia's best hitter and his long smashes will be sadly missed. His loss of temper may cost the Phillies the pennant, for they will think so if the team fails to finish first.

That Federal Express wreck from which and at which they conducted themselves so heroically, don't decrease their batting ability either on the road or at home. They are already solid with the fans of the Mound City and their rescuing stunt is bound to make them more so.

Their experiences is another link in the chain of evidence that ball clubs are lucky in the matter of traveling. In their constant journeyings, arrested by wreck would be natural to expect that more players would meet death or be seriously injured in such accidents, but the national pastimers always manage to escape in some way or other.

Rumor has it that Clark Griffith, manager of the Cincinnati Reds, is soon to quit the job and go around on a joyous vacation. There may be a grain or so of truth in this. Griff isn't having a life of ease and luxury in his present capacity. He worries even more than other managers and he has plenty to worry about, for the team is "going bad," and he is in it wrong with the home fans.

Griffith has enough of the world's goods to carry him comfortably through the balance of his life and it would be far from a foolish move if he were to step out of a position which is so unpleasant and begin to enjoy himself.

The Cubs will be here Saturday to start a series of five games, one having been postponed from the last visit. There won't be much of a chance to pass judgment by actual competition on the big trade during the Chicago series because Manager Chance is not likely to use more than one or two of the men he secured in the swap. That's one thing that makes the exchange look good from a Boston standpoint—the Rustlers are going King, Keiser, Weaver and Griffith steadily, while Wilbur Goode is the only ex-Bostonian who is more than likely to appear in the Chicago line-up.

Goode was the man Chance wanted to fill out his outfield, and he is evidently the only one of the quartet that the Peerless Leader cared anything about.

The series now going on at Detroit is just about the most important of the season so far in the American League. If the Tigers can take the majority of the games from the champions they will be encouraged to keep up the fight for the flag and to make it interesting right up to the finish. But if they are licked two or three times, Manager Jennings will have trouble keeping them from giving up.

Not that the Tigers are quitters, but they know that they must do more than their share in this battle with the Athletics, who don't meet with much resistance from the other clubs, with the exception of Chicago.

HEAD WOLGAST TO TAKE LONG REST

LOS ANGELES, July 12.—Wolgast and his wife left to-day for Chicago, where the two will remain for several days and then go to Cadillac, Mich., the champion's home town.

The little Michigan wildcat, who so decisively defeated Owen Moran on the Fourth of July, intends to take a long rest.

And he has earned a rest if ever a fighter did, for in the short space of two months he has met seven of the best lightweights in the land. Wolgast will return here about September 1.

The Thanksgiving Day match between Ad and Freddie Welsh for the lightweight championship is the one big topic of conversation among local boxing followers. While the fistic battle at Ascot Park will be defeated when he hooks up with Wolgast, there are those who think the Englishman will have a chance to win on points.

Wolgast was a visitor yesterday at the training camp of Percy Kilton, who is scheduled to box Johnny Kilbane twenty rounds next Saturday. Wolgast put on the gloves with Kilton and after a fast three-round set-to remarked that Patsy would surely win from the Cleveland boy.

MIKE SULLIVAN AFTER MOHA AND DILLON

Mike Twin Sullivan is resting up in Cambridge for the Summer months, but still has his eyes on the papers and writes a letter when anything goes wrong.

He sends word that no decisions were given in his bouts with Bob Moha or Jack Dillon when they met, but he states that he would like to have twenty-round bouts with these men as well as Jimmy Gardner. Clabby Dillon and any other men in that class.

Mike believes that a twenty-round bout between himself and Clabby would draw close to $20,000 out in Denver. A $6,000 house turned out for his ten-round bout with Harry Lewis in that city, and he believes a longer bout would draw twice as much.

Mike has offers to go to Winnipeg and out in Colorado, but he will rest up during the hot weather and then go after the Big ones.

HYANNIS OUT FOR DIAMOND HONORS

HYANNIS, July 12.—The Summer baseball season has been opened here with a good start. The town team, which is composed of some of the fastest men in this section, hopes to make a good showing for the entertainment of the Summer colonists as well as keeping the town in the front ranks of baseball.

The local team has been organized with Thompson catcher, Sherman pitcher, Lovell shortstop, Brown first, McLeona second and White at third. In the outfield, Gardner in left, Harris in centre and Handy in the right garden.

HORSEMEN SORE WITH B. A. COOK

Boston horsemen who entered in the Woonsocket trotting races scheduled for this week are dead sore on the Rhode Island track. Because the State authorities declined to permit the selling of pools Secretary Burton A. Cook declared the meeting off, instead of going ahead with a better meeting, as had been done at Hillsgrove the week before. Well informed horsemen through the country are coming more and more to believe that it is possible to have trotting meetings without the betting adjunct, but the Woonsocket folks were unwilling to take any chance.

The horsemen claim that they were assured that the ruling at Woonsocket would be held regardless of pool selling, and that a meeting open to the world would be held. The next time races are announced there, however, somebody will have to do a whole lot of hustling to secure a respectable entry list, horsemen say.

LEAGUE MANAGERS MAY BE SHIFTED

The remarkable shifting of managers in the major leagues two and three years ago is likely to be outdone at the end of the present season, when no less than six skippers will unfortunate second division clubs will be asked to show cause why they should not be supplanted. Every second division baseball city already beginning to pan on next year's teams, and at least six managers have already made up their minds to resign.

Clark Griffith hasn't a chance to stick in Cincinnati the way things are going there. Griff registered a failure with the Reds, although he commands a team of individual stars and has spent much money in the upkeep of his machine. The principal trouble with the Reds is that they are the same as it was when Griff bossed the Yankees. Cincinnati is down on the old sporting title in the same degree that Brooklyn, George Stovall, of Cleveland, Fred Clarke, of Boston Nationals, and possibly Billy Dares of Brooklyn.

JOHNSON NOT IN CONDITION

LONDON, July 12.—Jack Johnson, the world's pugilistic champion, over weight and out of condition, is finishing up his music hall engagements preparatory to starting training for his twenty-round fight with Pat Curran at Dublin early in August.

Johnson looks to weigh close to 200 pounds, almost five pounds more than when he defeated Jim Jeffries a little over a year ago. Curran is far from a dangerous opponent. Still Johnson will have to step a few rounds with the Irishman.

Platic experts here are wondering if Johnson has not neglected training too long. They know Jack has nothing to fear from Curran, but say if it were Langford that Johnson was to face in August he probably would be beaten.

Curran was whipped in a twenty-round engagement by Eddie McGoorty, the American middleweight in 1909, but since has gained some poundage and improved in skill. He weighs about 200 pounds now, but, of course, is not in Johnson's class.

Johnson and Curran are to go only twenty rounds, if it lasts that long. The English law prohibits finish contests, permitting only twenty-round contests for points. Accordingly, twenty will be far more than enough for Johnson to dispose of Curran if he gets into the ring anything like his old self.

The Dublin Amphitheatre, where the bout will be staged, will seat 30,000 people. A $100,000 gate is expected.

LONDON PAPERS ARE PLEASED OVER MEET

LONDON, July 12.—The London morning papers are delighted with the success of the intercollegiate contests and the sportsmanlike spirit displayed by all concerned.

The Daily Express regards it as most appropriate that the odd event was won on the old soil of an American Rhodes scholar, and that the latter's all round sportsmanship and the success of Rhodes ideals.

Sporting Life is pleased that after second a glorious result a return match will be arranged before another seven years elapses.

Helen's Plan to Surprise Warren Turns Out All Right After All

WHEN Helen entered the blind drawn, dust-covered apartment, her first impulse had been to give away to hysterical sobbing. But the prompt appearance of Mrs. Brady, the janitor's wife, to help her unpack and straighten out, had checked the tears.

Helen had some knowledge of Mrs. Grady's gossiping tendency, and determined to give her no chance to talk.

"I wanted to surprise Mr. Curtis," she explained, "so I sent the Delia to meet me, not knowing that Mr. Curtis had closed the apartment."

"Oh, yes, ma'am, Delia's been gone for most a month. And Mr. Curtis, he ain't slept here since."

As soon as she could she got rid of Mrs. Grady. She wanted to be alone when she telephoned Warren.

It was now a quarter of four. She would let him come at once. Somehow now that all her plans had miscarried, she had not the heart to put on the dainty white gown she had planned. She was too tired to do anything but lie down until he came.

She went to the telephone and gave his office number. Would he know her voice at once? How surprised he would be! In spite of her weariness, she thrilled with the thought that in a moment she would be talking to him.

Gone for the Day

"Hello, is this 1125 ——?" Will you give me Mr. Warren Curtis?"

"He has just left," answered the girl. "When will he be back?"

"Why, he's gone for the day."

"Gone for the day! Oh, I must reach him somehow! This is Mrs. Curtis. I've just gotten in—he was not expecting me. Where can I get him now?"

"Oh, I'm very sorry, Mrs. Curtis, but I don't know where you could reach him now. He just left about five minutes ago."

Helen hung up the receiver in despair. She could no longer check the tears. How miserably her plans had failed! Oh, why had she not telegraphed Warren in the first place? Why had she planned this surprise?

And now must she spend the whole evening and night here alone? Oh, no, no, she could not—that would be too hard!

She had had no luncheon and little breakfast, for it was always difficult for her to eat on a train. And now the faint pangs of hunger was added to that of fatigue.

She could call up his mother's—he might be staying there. But she shrank from letting his people know that she had managed so badly. That she had arrived with no one to meet her and was now forced to telephone around for her husband!

The Carlton Club! He might be there now! He often stopped there on his way from the office. And to call him there would be so much less humiliating than telephoning his family.

Hurriedly she called up the Carlton Club and waited while the clerk had him paged.

"Mr. Curtis is not here," he finally announced.

"Do you expect him in during the evening?"

"I can't say as to that. Sometimes he comes in and sometimes he doesn't."

"Well, if he should come, won't you tell him that Mrs. Curtis is at home and wishes him to call her up at once?"

"Yes, ma'am. I'll see he gets the message."

There was nothing to do but to call up his people. He might not go to the club at all. And she could not spend the whole evening and night alone.

It was a maid who answered when Helen finally called up his home. She was glad she did not have to talk with any member of the family just then.

No, Mr. Warren Curtis was not there, the maid informed her.

"But he is staying there, isn't he? Doesn't he sleep there at nights now"

"Sometimes—not always," answered the girl.

"Well, if he comes in this evening, will you tell him to call up his own apartment? Do you understand—his own apartment?"

"Yes, ma'am"

But as soon as Helen hung up the receiver, she began to worry about that message. Had the girl understood her? Why hadn't she said she was Mrs. Curtis? It was foolish to try to keep his people from knowing—they would know in the end. Oh, why could she do nothing right to-day? Why was everything going wrong?

It was almost 5 now. Tired as she was, she must try to get something to eat for Winifred and herself. They would both be sick if they went longer without food.

Tired and Heartsick

A search through the pantry disclosed only a box of stale crackers and some canned goods. She made out a hurried list of essentials, bread, butter, milk, eggs, etc., and telephoned to the grocer to send them over at once.

But when the grocer's boy emptied a basketful of brown paper parcels on the kitchen table, she stared at them helplessly. She was too tired, to heartsick, to even open these packages. So she poured a glass of milk for Winifred and one for herself, leaving the other things untouched.

Still in her traveling dress, she threw herself on the couch to rest. She was tired—tired, more tired than she had ever been before.

So this was the realization of all her plans for a beautiful surprise! The evening on which she had expected to be so happy with Warren she must now spend alone in this dusty, unkempt apartment.

But just then, as she was staring hopelessly at a figure in the rug, there came from the hall a faint preparatory stir of the telephone bell.

She started up breathlessly. Was it going to ring. Sometimes that whirring sound was only a false alarm. Another second and it rang loudly. Warren—Warren! Oh, if it was only Warren! She flew out to the hall.

"Yes—hello!" she called excitedly.

And it was Warren! Never had his voice sounded so deep and strong. Never had it been so glad to hear it.

"Oh, where are you—where are you?"

"At the club. Just got your message. Say, I'll be there in fifteen minutes. It's too bad, dear; how did it happen? Didn't you telegraph?"

"Oh, I wanted to surprise you, so I telegraphed Delia and she isn't here. Oh, it's been dreadful."

"Well, I should say. I'm awfully sorry, kitten. But never mind. Put on your prettiest dress and we'll go out and celebrate. Now hurry, I'll be there in fifteen minutes. Good-by."

In fifteen minutes! Could she bathe and dress in fifteen minutes? Already she was getting out of her clothes, as she ran to the bathroom and turned on the water. While the tub was filling she unstrapped her trunk and dragged out her prettiest dress—the one she had planned to wear.

All her weariness was gone now. All the distress and discomfort of the day was forgotten. She was breathlessly happy. They were to have their beautiful evening together after all.

"Don't cut up rough, old chap!" whined the borrower. "I relied on you!"

"Did you? Well, I'll not thank you for the compliment!" snapped the other. "See here. You can have the goods as soon as you pay me for the last I gave you."

"Great Scott, man," cried the borrower despairingly, "I can't possibly wait as long as that!"

The Vanity Box

Synopsis of Preceding Instalments

Sir Ian and Lady Hereward, just back in England from a trip to Paris, make a call on their neighbor, Mrs. Forester. They walk from the ancestral home of the Herewards, Friar's Moat, two miles through the woods to Riding Wood Hall, the home of Mrs. Forester.

Lady Hereward drops a little gold case which she carries, and Sir Ian, as he recovers it and returns it to her, recalls that he has never seen the inside of it. Many believe that the "vanity box" contains a picture which Lady Hereward jealously guards.

Sir Ian is forty-one and bronzed with the sun of African campaigns. He resigned his commission when he succeeded to the estate of the Herewards. His beautiful wife is said to be some months older. Despite this fact and that he is said to have experienced a romance with a much younger girl, he is all devotion to his handsome and remarkably preserved wife.

Lady Hereward quizzes her husband rapidly in admiration before a portrait by Sir Joshua Reynolds. It is that of a beautiful young woman, Mrs. Forester, who enters at that moment, calls attention to the fact that it greatly resembles Teresina Ricardo, to whom Sir Ian was said to have been attentive when she was in India. She follows this up with the startling information that Jeffrey Ricardo is just landed in England, after years of absence, and that she has planned to give a dinner party that very day in her one-time girlhood friend, Millicent Hereward.

Lady Hereward is plainly agitated and Sir Ian appears embarrassed. Lady Hereward decides not to wait at Riding Wood as she had intended, but to return at once with Sir Ian through the woods to Friar's Moat.

As the two leave Riding Wood, Lady Hereward announces that she has some souvenirs to present to Sir Ian's guests, souvenirs on the way home. Sir Ian protests, but Lady Hereward is firm and they and goes directly home. There he finds Teresina Ricardo, who had called in the absence of the Herewards, about to leave.

She holds out her hand to Sir Ian, and the butler, who admitted her, notes that a wistful look of something approaching affection seems to beam from her eyes. The fair visitor is a girl of twenty-six or twenty-seven. She has a remarkably beautiful voice and bewitching gray eyes that shine beneath deep black lashes. Her blushes as Sir Ian holds her hand.

Sir Ian is apparently greatly embarrassed. They touch on their romance of years before and Sir Ian plainly shows that he is laboring under a great strain. Miss Ricardo has just arrived from India, and tells Sir Ian that she felt impelled to visit him and Lady Hereward, who had been good to her in the past.

"SHE did say at once, that we would come home early, not to miss you and Mrs. Ricardo. She—we started soon after three, but—we parried in the woods, and I—came on ahead. I should think—she won't be long."

"Then—shall I wait? Would you like me to wait?"

"Yes. Yes, I would like it." he said. There was no doubt of his pained embarrassment now. It was plain that he was very deeply moved, even, it would seem, in almost unbearable distress. Miss Ricardo saw it only too clearly, and thought that she knew the cause. She grew pale.

"Ian, don't be unhappy," she said and, being, in a very frank, sweet tone. "Please don't. Believe me, there's no reason why you should. Everything's over and forgotten, and I should like to be your friend."

"Why, do you think if I'd had any stupid feelings, I should come to visit my cousin Norman's wife, so near this—place? I knew I should be close to you and Milly, for I'd heard all about Friars' Moat, of course, from Maud, when you came in for your uncle's title; and I knew you had been living here for about seven years.

"I had to come to England, you see—but maybe you don't see; for perhaps nobody told you of my brother-in-law's marriage? And the children need me no longer—well, there was no home for me in India—no home I wanted—and I felt I should find myself a little 'out' of things after so many years.

"Maud asked me to visit her, and I didn't care to refuse. I thought—I thought I should like to meet you and Milly. Can't you understand, and let us be friends, as if there had never been any foolishness?"

"Foolishness!" echoed Sir Ian. "Oh, God—Terry!"

Agony in Voice

"Don't!" exclaimed the woman. "It's all so far in the past, when I was a child, almost; and if I ever thought there was anything to forgive, I forgave long ago."

"If I could only tell you!" he groaned. "But I can't, I'm bound——"

"Hush, don't try to tell me anything," she said hurriedly. "I wouldn't have come if I hadn't forgotten everything but our friendship, and my friendship with Milly, who used to be so good—so very good to me when I was a child—and she no more than a girl.

"I don't want to be reminded of anything except happy memories, and though you have made me rather foolish and tearful—oh, without meaning to, I know!—I do not think it would be better if I stayed now, and waited for your wife to come home. I—I made up my mind to pay this visit, you know, though—it wasn't quite easy; and Maud never heard—anything disagreeable, I hope, so you see—Yes, I am almost sure I had better stay, don't you?"

"Yes, I am sure. Stay!" answered Sir Ian. "Shall we go into the house?"

There was agony in his eyes and voice, but Teresina Ricardo would not seem to heed. She had known that the first meeting would be difficult, though she had not expected him to show such remorse as this. She had thought often that perhaps he felt none.

With her heart beating so hard that she was half afraid he might hear it, she talked about the beauty of the old house, and of the whole place and the country round. She had walked from Maud's, she said.

She had wanted to walk, and Maud directed her so well that it would have been impossible to lose the way. "Only a mile and a half, and straight along, after the first turn. How lovely the Surrey lanes are! I didn't come out into the blazing sunlight once, till I'd got within six yards of your lodge, then I felt quite shady avenues. I don't look very hot, do I?"

"You look just as you used to look when we rode together—" he began, but she stopped him, laughing.

"Now!—it's my turn to cry 'nonsense,' and I won't beg your pardon, as you did mine. I was eighteen then—I'd been ever so much a time, which seems impossible—and now I'm thirty-one, looking every day of my age."

Would Wait for Milly

"Not, of course we'll go into the house, where I'm sure it's beautifully cool, and wait for Milly. Did you say you thought she would be long?"

"I suppose she will come home—soon," Sir Ian replied heavily.

"Maud says she's as devoted to good works as ever."

"Oh, yes, very devoted."

"She was always the most unselfish mortal."

"I—yes."

"I don't wonder a bit, you know, Sir Ian, that you fell in love with her. Don't answer, please! There's nothing to say. I wanted to tell you that. I've felt so about it—almost from the first."

"Oh, God!" he said again, half under his breath.

They had moved away from the front door as they talked, but now Miss Ricardo hastily walked through a long open window, which led into a room unmistakably a drawing room. "May we go in here?" she threw over her shoulder, brightly, as if she had not heard the stifled cry of the distressed man.

He followed, without speaking, but the look on his stricken face made her sick by way of changing the subject. "Who is Miss Verney? I don't remember Maud's writing about her; but then Maud writes so seldom, and only puts into her letters what she thinks the most important things. Is Miss Verney important? Your footman wanted to call her down to see me, but I wouldn't let him."

The Manicure Lady

She Tells George How She Called Down a Masher

"I MUST be dog days," said the Manicure Lady. "I never seen so many crazy pups in my life."

"What now?" asked the Head Barber.

"Oh, the little wart that just went out—he kind of got on my nerves. He wanted to know where I lived, so he could send me up a box of fine bonbons. The nerve of him!"

"What reply, if any, did you make?" asked the Head Barber.

"I asked him," replied the Manicure Lady, "where his wife lived, and when he asked me why, I told him I just thought I might send up a nice box of something to eat for her and the babies. He quit like a dog, then, and believe me, George, you won't see him fussing around here any more. I can see one of them false alarms through the side of a mountain. Gee, how I hate 'em!"

"That kind of men ain't affected none by the bent, said the Head Barber. "They are always the same, rain or shine, sun or snow. I was shaving one the other day—he comes in every day, as I have to stand for his fierce talk about how he cheats. 'Family ties is like soap bubbles,' he says to me one day. 'They are here made to be broke.' I felt like telling him that the only ties suited for him was a few lengths of rope tied to a rafter with a nice loop to fit just below his ears."

The Man She Adores

The Manicure Lady regarded the Head Barber admiringly. "My goodness, George," she said, finally, "you are the kind of man I would marry if I was ever to marry and settle down. I adore a manly man, a man of that has the courage of his conviction after he has been convicted. There's a lot of class about you, George, even if they do say that your razors pull now and then.

"But it ain't only the little wart that I was speaking of just now that seems affected by this torrid summer, George. I was reading a back number of an evening paper last night, and I read where a society girl down at Newport plunged madly into the battle where a lot of firemen were trying to save a house. This buff's name was something like Warren, and when she came along and saw a fire in the fatuality of one of them swell cottages, she leaped from her carriage and seized an axe out of the puny hands of a six-foot fireman, after which she smashed a hole through the side of the laundry and helped the firemen to turn a stream of water into the seething blaze of flames. When the fire had been put out, she turned away quiet like, and when the firemen and her friends complimented her, she only shook her head and said, I only done what any heiress would have did!'

"Was that in the paper, on the level?" asked the Head Barber.

She Wore White Serge

"It sure was," replied the Manicure Lady. "I seen it with my own eyes. The story even went on to say how she was dressed, all in white serge, with white shoes and a white hat. Do you suppose that the intense heat had anything to do with it, George?"

"I would think so," answered the Head Barber. "If I thought for a minute that anything like that ever came off. It sounds about as reasonable to me as some scurvy, [illegible] reading yarns with heads like

Nothing to Talk About

By WINIFRED BLACK

THREE or four women started an Anti-Gossip Society in a Kansas town the other day, whereupon the Kansas town's newspaper came out with an editorial on the subject of women and gossip.

It was the cutest little editorial you ever saw—written by a man with a mind about as deep as the breadth of a slender hair.

He didn't approve of the Anti-Gossip Club, he said—for why?

"What can women talk about?" he asked in all seriousness. "There is nothing for them to talk of except dress and the neighbors, so why criticise them for gossiping?"

Nothing for them to talk of? Why, you poor, little, under-sized, under-done creature, you. What do you, in your infinite wisdom, talk of when you and your cronies gather in the chairs in front of the country grocery?

Nothing to talk of? Why, can't they read—these women you know? Have they never been to school? Don't they take the daily newspapers? Are there no great trees growing in your town, no beautiful flowers? Have you no splendor of Summer sunsets, no sweet dawn of Summer mornings? Are there no rainbows there in Kansas, no sudden clouds bursting the burning East? Are there no birds there to sing and to love, no little children to laugh with, no old people to comfort, no broken hearts to mend, no bright ambitions to encourage, love to thrill, no hope to nourish?

Nothing to talk of? Why, there's the whole world to talk about, and the universe besides!

There is the little missionary, just home from India; she's visiting the preacher's sister. Let's have her up to lunch and find out something about her sisters over there in that strange land of marigolds and musk.

Let's ask her all about the real women of India, not about their religion or their converts, but about their real women and their real lives. Do they bear their children as we do in anguish, and do they rear them in joy?

Does the mother of many sons thrill to the voice of her first born, as we in our lives thrill? Is there love there, as we look upon it, and friendship, or do they live as they seem to in the books we read of them, like painted figures on a painted fan? Do they quarrel over who makes the best bread, and do two sisters-in-law ever really love each other better than anything else in the world, over there?

And tell us, do tell us, little, gray missionary with the faded eyes, do the men there really believe that the women who bore them are nothing but fatuous fools who have nothing to talk of but dress and each other?

There's the gnarled old fellow who lives on the edge of town. He makes his living selling berries and fish in the Summer, and shovelling snow and clearing walks in Winter. Stupid old fellow he is, if you try to gossip with him. Just get him started to telling you about the woody things he knows about. Why, to hear him talk you'd think a trout knew more than any United States Senator who ever lived. He's a regular gold mine of things to talk about.

And the quiet, little, invalid woman down the street, what a lot of books she reads as she swings there in her hammock. She can talk about them, too, and talk well.

Nothing to talk about! Why, brother of Kansas, what sort of woman is it there you are unfortunate enough to know?

He Did It

THE young man was leaning on the garden gate chatting with the object of his affections when the latter said hesitatingly: "I am going to ask a great favor of you."

"It's already granted," he answered devotedly.

"A very great favor," she repeated, as if doubtful of the propriety of stating it. "You're sure that you won't think it forward of me?"

"Never," he answered; "nothing you asked could be too great a trial. Only tell me what I can do for you."

"Well," she replied, with evident reluctance, "would you mind not leaning on that gate? Father painted this afternoon and he will be awfully provoked if he has to do it all over again."

TRY IT

A Mystery Solved

For years medical men have been seeking a cure for eczema, the most common and most stubborn of skin diseases. Some said it was a blood disease; some said it was the result of indigestion. It remained for one studious chemist to settle beyond any question that eczema in many forms is a skin disease and related in no way to a disordered condition of the blood. This same chemist experimented with many antiseptic healing and soothing agents, but it was not until he formed the compound Cadum that he at last found what he had given to the world something that would bring relief to hundreds of sufferers. Cadum ranks to-day with the great remedies of the medical world. Its action is so positive that the itching of eczema is stopped at once. People who have tried and scratched for years find sleep and rest soon after Cadum is applied. Cadum is sold by all druggists at 50c and 25c a box. It is for eczema in all its forms, also for pimples, blotches, itch, tetter, scaly skin, crusty tions, chafings, psoriasis, rash, sores, scurvy, [illegible], itching piles, etc.

CURSES! BUT WILL FOOL THAT BUNK HEAD CLAUDE ESCLAIRE IS TRAITOR! WE'LL BE MINE
NITRO-GLYCERINE
CLAUDE MY HERO, I LOVE ONLY YOU. HOME SWEET HOME
HERSHFIELD

Gorgol, the black-hearted ally of Desperate Desmond, leans over the rock and watches Rosamond sliding to her death. Wicked as Gorgol is, we cannot blame him so much as we do Desmond, for the white man has the master mind, and Gorgol has never had the advantages of early education, and education means much in the battle of life.

On the opposite side of the chasm, Desmond, whose heart is blacker than Gorgol's face, is also jeering the helpless girl as she slides with frightful speed toward the terrible fate which he has prepared for her. The cowardly villain relies upon his savage follower to protect him from the vengeance of Claude Eclaire, whose Rosamond he is about to sacrifice.

Back in the pathless Borneo forest Claude Eclaire is not idle. With the aid of Gumgots and some friendly hunters, he bends down a stout palm tree, until the combined strength of his allies can barely prevent it from flying up. Then Claude gets upon his wheel and, balancing himself with rare skill, he shoots to his trusty aides to let go the ropes. Resourceful and game is Claude.

Whizz! goes the bicycle on its death-defying flight through space, and Claude smiles grimly as he feels the wheel bump against the head of Gorgol, thus effectually interrupting that person's gloating over the impending doom of Rosamond. Even now it is hard to guess how a man on a bicycle can save the girl from the cunning and wantonness villainy of Desperate Desmond. Yet still Claude soars on.

Saved! Rosamond is saved and by her ever-faithful Claude. With rare skill he has caught the sliding wheel between the wheels of his bicycle, and by a daring trick he reverses his position in mid-air. Quickly he pedals up the rope, while his friends cover Desmond with their rifles. A moment before and the villain seemed victorious. Now he is in Claude's power. 'Tis a topsy-turvy world.

Poetic justice for Desmond! He is bung from the wheel which lately supported Rosamond and set flying down with a barrel of nitroglycerine to act as a buffer. The explosion that must ensue will be terrific. "I'm the boy!" cries Desperate Desmond, as he slides toward the explosive. Is he the boy? To-morrow's pictures will show us.

Once He Was Billy's Best Friend, but Susanna Changed All of That

KENNETT HARRIS.

SUSANNA lifted her limpid and innocent blue eyes to the level of mine with a grave, questioning look that seemed to imply that it was none of my business, but she broke down and giggled. I waited, and after a little my patience had its usual reward.

"I'd like to ask you a question or two first," she said.

"I'm entirely in the dark about it," I protested. "Billy hasn't thought fit to confide in me."

"Oh, I know all about it," said Susanna, nodding. "All I wanted was to find out if you would be sympathetic. It's horrid to tell people things and have them lift their eyebrows and shrug their shoulders as if they thought you were to blame."

"You may ask your questions, but I don't think I have deserved the doubt," I said in an injured tone.

"No, you're a dear as a general thing," admitted Susanna. I haven't any doubt really. I know you wouldn't care to share a divided affection, for instance."

Billy Trusted Him

"I'm not so sure about that," I replied. "I don't believe I have your whole heart, for instance."

"Nonsense!" said Susanna. "It's altogether different with you. I don't think that you have ever had a bad influence over me, unless it was when you used to give me so much candy, and Billy has never objected in the least, so you see it's not at all the same."

"I'm obliged to Billy for his forbearance," I told her. "It's nice to be considered perfectly harmless. I suppose if he had objected to me I would have been sacrificed without a pang of remorse."

"Did you ever know me to give up any thing I liked?" asked Susanna. And I was bound to concede that I never had. "But do you think that Ferguson had a bad effect on Billy?" I asked in turn.

"I suppose you think you are very clever," remarked Susanna. "Since you ask the question, though, I'll tell you that Billy used to be terribly wild before he knew me."

"I never heard of it," I said.

"He confessed that he had been," said Susanna, with an air of finality. "He did—oh, all sorts of wild and reckless things." She opened her eyes very wide to impress me with a sense of Billy's enormities.

"Until he came under your sweet and redeeming influence and resolved to try to be more worthy of you," I suggested.

"Mr. Billy has been talking, has he?" Susanna murmured. "All right for you, Mr. Billy."

"Don't do the young man an injustice, Susanna, my dear," said I. "He never talks on certain subjects. He's a man to reticence. That was a natural supposition of mine."

"Well, Mr. Ferguson was his constant companion. You know that, don't you?" "They were college chums, and Orestes and Pylades were fools to them, and they've been that way ever since," I agreed. "That's why I wondered."

His Fatal Error

"At what?" she asked.

"At their estrangement, of course. Equally, of course, I knew that you had something to do with it. My dear girl, I really think that you are unfair to Ferguson. He's not at all a bad sort."

Susanna pouted. "You're just like Billy," she said. "Billy was eternally singing his praises and telling me what a wonderful fellow he was."

"That's where he made his fatal error," I observed. "He ought to have conveyed the impression that Ferguson had always bored him and that he didn't amount to much in any particular."

"Do you think that would have been quite honest?" Susanna asked, reproachfully. "And do you think that would have made any difference to me?" she went on, with spirit. "I usually form my own opinion of a man, no matter what anybody may say about him, and I formed my own opinion of Mr. Ferguson. I admit that I did think Billy might have a rather exaggerated idea of his friend's perfections at first, but when Billy brought him to call I had to own that he was right. I think he's very nice."

"Billy?"

"No, silly. Mr. Ferguson."

I sighed heavily. "I do wish that you would stay in one place long enough to keep me from being dizzy."

"I believe Billy had some kind of an idea of asking him to come to live with us when we married," Susanna was apparently addressing the electrolier.

"I think that would be perfectly lovely," she continued. "Billy wouldn't get lonely."

A Big-Hearted Boy

I felt it was incumbent on me to be severe and I let it appear in my tone. "Billy's a good, simple, big-hearted boy and he wanted two people that he liked very much to like each other very much."

"I was quite willing to oblige him," Susanna said, with an odd little smile. "I did my very best. Even Billy can't say that I didn't. I think he liked me, too. If he didn't he was an awful pretender."

I began to feel the dawn of enlightenment.

"There is no satisfying a man," Susanna sighed. "First, Billy was hurt because I wasn't enthusiastic about Mr. Ferguson, and then when I met him and began to be enthusiastic he didn't like that."

I said I could imagine he wouldn't. Because when Susanna is enthusiastic she is very much so.

"And when Mr. Ferguson took me to lunch—"

"Oh, he took you to lunch, did he?"

"Why not?" asked Susanna, defiantly. "Billy said he did think he'd been bearish, and I don't see anything wrong about going to lunch with Billy's brother. And Billy always insisted that he was loyal." She smiled that odd little smile again.

"And now they don't speak to each other?"

"Isn't it too bad!" she cooed. "I've tried to get Billy to be reconciled to him, but he gets in quite a temper if I even suggest it. I'm so sorry! And so I am going to give you some tea, and send you away."

"I asked Susanna if she would mind letting me see her hands and she stretched them out to me in a pretty, straight-armed gesture.

They were, and are very nice hands, small and white, with a tinge of pink in the palms, dimpled instead of knuckled and beautifully manicured. On one of her fingers Billy's engagement solitaire was sparkling, and the nails didn't look in the least like claws.

Synopsis of Preceding Instalments

GUSTAV LINGG, wireless operator on the steamer Lambton, goes ashore for a stroll while his ship is loading at her dock in New York and becomes lost when a dense fog sweeps up from the bay. On a side street he meets a beautiful young woman, whom he has never seen before, and who calls him by name. "I want to talk with you," she says. "I must talk with you—alone."

Lingg, abashed, stares at her boobishly for a moment and then turns and flees. He goes a long way and finally, just as a ferry whistle tells him that he is nearing the street, he enters a narrow street, only to find his way blocked by a cab, a cab with an open door.

In the cab sits the woman from whom he had fled. "I wanted to warn you," she says, and makes him enter the cab.

"Of what?" he asks, as the cab starts.

"Not to sail on the Lambton."

"WHY not?" he asked. The woman could see that he was not as impressed as he might be. "It will not be good for you."

"It never is, on these third-class boats."

Must Stick to Duty

He insisted on being literal or nothing. "But there are dangers ahead of you—dangers you don't and can't understand."

"I don't see how I can help that," said the youth of little imagination. "When the company puts me on a ship or gives me a station anywhere, I've got to stick to it."

"Then you don't believe me?"

"It's not a matter of believing. It's more a matter of not understanding you."

A change seemed to creep over her, a lightening and relaxing change, such as would come to the New England garden he had thought of when it passed from shadow to sunlight.

"Would you like to understand me?" she asked, turning her eyes full on his somewhat abashed young face. He blushed and tingled under the directness of her eyes.

"How could I?" he succeeded in stammering out.

"Won't you stay and try?" she murmured, pregnantly.

The prospect did not exactly appal him. It merely puzzled him now as something beyond the reach of his delimited imagination. The curl hadn't been taken out of Romance, after all, he told himself.

He could see the brooding spirit of her incarnate before his very eyes, coifed and gowned like a goddess. But the very radiance of the vision made him doubly afraid of her.

"I'm afraid I'll have to get back," was his hesitating rejoinder.

"Back where?"

"To my ship," he faltered.

"But you mustn't!" she murmured, with a solicitous hand on his still tingling arm.

"I've got to get back," he persisted, reaching and fumbling for the door.

"But not yet—not here," she begged him.

"I must," he declared, trying to stand on his feet under the cramping cab-hood, and tugging at the door-handle.

"Only listen to me for a moment," the woman was saying, almost pleadingly.

Drawn Into Cab

He allowed her to draw him gently back into the seat beside her. But disquiet had again taken possession of him.

"Am I so terrible," she asked, with her hand still on his arm. Her voice was low then cried and counter-cried.

and quiet; her half-smiling lips were parted a little, giving a touch of languid abandon to her otherwise intent and earnest face.

And here was the very thing he had been so restlessly in search of; but now that it was before him, within his grasp, he was wordlessly afraid of it.

"N—no, you're not terrible," he feebly reassured her, as though the words had to be paid out like links of a rusted cable.

"You're not afraid of me?" she inquired, with a disarming soft fatimacy of tone that sent the blood once more rioting through his veins. He did not answer. He merely gazed at her in inarticulate and tingling wonder.

"You're not, are you?" she persisted, stooping forward and turning her body about in the cab seat so that her face was directly before him, within a foot of his own.

"No," he managed to say.

He noticed that she almost closed her eyes.

"Then kiss me," he heard her low voice murmuring, with her parted red lips lifting and creeping audaciously up to his, her hand already on his shoulder.

He drew back white and stunned. It was beyond reason. It was so beyond reason that it brought a hundred unheeded suspicions yelping and snapping about him.

Things that once seemed accidental and trivial took on a new significance. He could carpenter inconsequentialities into dim and towering structures of intrigue. He was afraid of himself and his surroundings.

The woman must have seen this the very moment she locked her arms about his reluctant neck, for her face changed and hardened. Even before he saw that change, though, he was crowding and struggling and pulling away from her.

Unlooked For.

The entire situation was so unlooked-for, so startling, that no new turn of it could add to his sense of surprise. He was conscious of the fact that she was crying out, while she still clung to him, and that the cab had come to a sudden stop.

He noticed a figure at the door and a man's huge hand dart in towards him as it swung open. And still again he heard her shriek of simulated fear. It might even have been anger—he was not sure; he could not fathom it all.

But he felt, dimly, that he was being tricked into something beyond his understanding; that the whole thing was some sort of trap.

He resented being clawed at; he resented the way in which the man at the cab door was dragging and pulling him to the street. There was no longer any doubt as to that intruder's immediate intention.

The wireless operator's one passion was to escape, to fight his way back to freedom. He remembered his ship and his waiting station, and how Heilig, the engineer, would have the laugh on him.

He was fighting like a terrier by this time, striking out blindly, in a frenzy of sheer panic. He was stung by the injustice of it all, and kept calling and shouting for help as he fought, fortified by the memory that his hands were clean, that he had done nothing amiss.

An Interruption.

He was dazed and bruised, but he still fought and resisted, imagining it was his opponent's mad intention to kill him.

He saw the shifting figures of men appear through the fog, and stand about in a circle, impassively watching his struggles. But still he fought and shouted.

His cries brought a patrolman with a nightstick in his hand. He could see the circle disrupted and scattered.

He could hear the relieving sound of the falling club on the body of the brute above him, and sharp oaths and groans, and then a fourth figure pushed peremptorily in through the re-formed circle of onlookers, a figure not in uniform, but quick-acting and authoritative. This newcomer seemed to pull the entangled and struggling trio apart in one breath, as a child separates a puzzle-picture.

He flung back the clubbing patrolman. He swept aside the still fighting second figure. He dragged the fallen operator to his feet, with a sharp question or two at the other man, who was blowing his nose on a handkerchief macerated with blood. Then he called out to the waiting cab-driver: "To the police station, straight!" and all but carried the dazed operator back into the waiting carriage.

He turned at the step, before following the operator into that cab, and spoke a crisp word or two to the still blinking patrolman.

To Be Continued To-morrow

Roused at Last

THE boy's eyes were closed, and all attempts to rouse him were ineffectual. The physician had watched by the bedside for half an hour without success, and finally announced that the only hope of saving his life was to rouse him from his stupor.

"Cannot some of you induce him to make some exertion?" he asked. "We can do nothing unless we can make him do something for himself."

Then the boy's mother went to the bedside and pleaded it with him to rouse himself for her sake, but there was not even a motion of the muscles of the face to show that he heard. She told him how much she would do for him, and what nice times they would have when he got well, but he did not stir.

The father spoke of buying him a pony and a little shot-gun, but he did not seem to understand. Even the mention of a circus and a moving picture show passed unheeded, and he gave up in despair.

Then the sick boy's little brother crept to the bedside, and said, softly:

"Eddie, the gipsie who lived in that big house up there's moved, with a lot of windows and the greenhouse, have moved, and the place is empty."

The eyes slowly opened, and the little brother went on, exultantly:

"All the boys is going there Monday to throw stones through the windows."

"Who got first crack at 'em?" asked the sick boy, feebly.

"You do," replied the little brother. "The boys gives you first throw 'cause you can throw straighter than any of 'em."

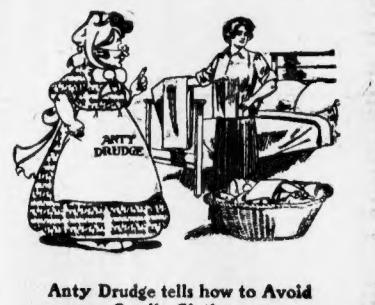
"Jupiter! I'll make the people as owns that house think there's been an earthquake!" exclaimed the invalid boy, trying to sit up in bed. "My! won't we have fun, though?"

"He'll live!" cried the doctor, joyfully, and the little brother was taken out and feasted on pie and cakes until he was well-nigh ill himself.

Save Your Teeth

Do not think because your teeth are getting loose and you have pain, that a dentist is necessary to suffer with long and painful treatment.

When the teeth are loose and sensitive, and the gums recede and bleed, get a 50c bottle of Calli's Anti-Riggs from Hoggins & Dutton or any of the Jaynes Drug Stores. This is a scientific treatment, and is recommended by leading dentists and professional people. Sold under absolute guarantee of satisfaction or money back. Begin its use to-day and save your teeth, mouth and firm for a lifetime. Calli's Anti-Riggs gives quick relief in any sore mouth caused by new plates. Circular free. CALLI'S ANTI-RIGGS CO., 55 William st., Monroe, New York.



Anty Drudge tells how to Avoid Smelly Clothes.

Mrs. Jones—"My wash that came home today smells of fried bacon. The washwoman must dry the clothes in her kitchen where the steam from the cook stove penetrates everything."

Anty Drudge—"Why don't you have your wash done at home? Get Fels-Naptha soap and you'll find washing easy. Besides the clothes will be sweet and fresh, as well as being clean and white."

No matter what soap you use you can probably get the clothes white—if you rub hard enough. But why shouldn't the soap do its part of the work?

Fels-Naptha is the friend that takes the washday work off your shoulders.

Fels-Naptha soap loosens the dirt for you, and when you come to finish the wash you find that the work that YOU used to do, has been done by the soap.

Fels-Naptha is the NEW WAY soap. It saves time and energy.

It remains for you to prove that to yourself by trying it. But follow directions. Boiling and hot water simply prevent the Fels-Naptha action instead of aiding it. And this is its radical difference from other soaps.

You realize what this means to you. No more drudging in clouds of steam. You merely soap the pieces, roll and place them in cool or lukewarm water. Thirty minutes later you find that Fels-Naptha has done the work. Rub lightly, rinse, hang out and the results will amaze you. Directions on red and green wrapper.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; LATEST FINANCIAL NEWS

NEW YORK, July 12.—The stock market opened fairly strong to-day with prices generally slightly higher. Early demand for Brooklyn Rapid Transit was good and small fractional gains were scored by Union Pacific, Reading and Baltimore & Ohio. Louisville and Nashville showed unusual activity in the early trading, advancing ⅝ of a point to 154¾. The strength of this issue was deflected in Atlantic Coast Line. Erie first preferred moved up ¾ in the first few minutes of trading, but no change was shown in the common. The industrials were neglected as a rule.

Steel common yielded ⅛ point, while American Smelting and Amalgamated Copper held unchanged from last night's close. B. R. T. bonds found a good market. Price changes in the leading issues at the opening were as follows: Erie up ¼, Erie 1st pfd. up ¼, Reading up ¼, B. R. T. up ¼, Union Pac. up ¼, Missouri Pac. up ¼, Southern Pac. up ¼, Canadian Pac. off ⅛, Southern Railway up ¼.

The curb market opened steady, with Standard Oil quoted at 644 bid, 646¾ asked, and American Tobacco 393 bid and 396 asked.

In London market a cheerful tone was displayed in American securities and trade was brisk. Canadian Pacific held a shade under the best after making a new high record.

A Want Ad. often leads to fortune.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

Technically natural reactions will, in all probability, be the order of the day for some time to come. The bears will, perhaps, make trifling profits by selling short at the top of the bulges, but the most money will come to those who buy stocks on the recessions.

$ $ $

The use of stop-loss orders by both the bulls and the bears is very general and may be the means of restricting the range of prices, although in spite of those there may be some swift ups and downs before the market strikes its real gait. Money being as cheap as it is, it will take something out of the ordinary to bring about more than the customary reactions.

$ $ $

August is going to be a critical time for the bears this year. It will be just as well to cancel all forecasts of fiscal yields. Those used in this column were based on the theory that the public reports of rain were correct. There is such a vast difference between the weather reports of the Government and those current from day to day in the newspapers that one should be cautious, to say the least.

$ $ $

The intense heat still prevailing throughout most of the agricultural district made the money traders think that perhaps they had been too precipitate in rejoicing over the rains of last week. The Government weather report says that in Iowa and Missouri the severe heat, with a general absence of rainfall, has intensified the drouth condition prevailing a week ago, and similar conditions exist in portions of South Dakota. There is a general lack of sufficient rainfall. In the cotton States the weather conditions, are, as a rule, more favorable, but the whole country needs rain.

$ $ $

Present weather conditions are not necessarily fatal to the bull campaign, for in its calculations of yields for the year the Government in its report of Monday took the drouth into consideration. Nothing but abnormally bad weather from now on will reduce the size of the crops. There is always deterioration in the latter part of the Summer, anyway, and the thing that concerns State street is whether this deterioration will be normal or abnormal.

Any One May Enter

The American's Great $10,000.00 Proverb Contest

TO-DAY—NOW!

Those who wish to enter the American's $10,000 Proverb Contest now, but do not know exactly how to go about it, should understand that it is no trouble whatsoever to place one's self in line for the winning of these rich rewards.

Nothing is required but that you solve a complete set of puzzle pictures. If you chance to have missed any of the puzzle pictures, the Contest Department will gladly furnish you with all of them.

The back numbers of pictures and answer blanks are kept in full supply at the "Proverb Contest Department, 275 Devonshire St." You may call for them, or they will be mailed to you promptly upon receipt of the regular rates of the Boston Daily and Sunday American, for the days on which the pictures originally appeared.

That is, the Sunday American back numbers are obtainable at 5c (plus return postage); the daily back numbers at 1c (plus return postage).

Why not order the back numbers to-day and give yourself the satisfaction of not having overlooked such a wonderful opportunity as this, which the Proverb Contest affords?

The conditions of the contest, together with the complete list of prizes, can be found elsewhere on this page. Read the conditions carefully, and follow strictly their few and simple regulations. If you do so, you can have no trouble. But if you desire further information on special matters, write to the "Proverb Contest Editor, 275 Devonshire St.," and your questions will be answered in the columns of the American.

It should be remembered that neatness is an important consideration in awarding the prizes. This means plain legibility and cleanliness of the answers submitted. And all contestants should be careful of their spelling.

The PROVERB BOOK, which has been published by the American, is a very useful guide as to matters of wording and spelling. Some of the best known proverbs are often quoted incorrectly by the best educated people. The American's PROVERB BOOK may be regarded as an authority on these matters, so far as this contest goes.

Aside from its usefulness in the contest—due mainly, of course, to the fact that it contains all the proverbs that will be represented by the puzzle pictures—the PROVERB BOOK is highly interesting and instructive in itself. It is attractively made up and contains more than 3,000 proverbs—the concentrated wisdom of all times and all countries.

A copy of the American's PROVERB BOOK will be mailed to any address upon receipt of a money order for 25c at the Contest Department, or copies may be obtained by calling at the Contest Headquarters.

Do not delay in starting to solve these puzzle pictures.

You will find that it is a most pleasant, daily mental recreation, and will be of great educational value to you, and, perhaps of financial value also.

The time to enter this contest is NOW!

Solve today's picture and save it—solve tomorrow's picture and save it—then send for any of the back numbers which you may have missed, and you are then able to start in this contest at once, and you are on an equal footing with those who began the day the first picture appeared.

The capital prize is a $2,500 Seashore Bungalow. Among the other prizes will be noted Automobiles, Power Boats, Pianos, and a host of other prizes, making the grand total of 1,000 prizes to the value of $10,000. Get your share!.

The way to do it is to start today to solve the puzzle pictures!

Conditions of the Contest.

THE BOSTON AMERICAN PROVERB CONTEST is a contest of skill and judgment. Prizes to the amount of $10,000 will be given absolutely free by the Boston American to the persons living in New England, irrespective of age, is eligible to enter this contest.

Each set of answers must contain only one answer to each picture, but each person is entitled to send in three complete sets of answers.

The answers to the puzzle pictures may be sent in writing in longhand either with pen or pencil; they may be written on the typewriter or may be printed in any manner to suit the fancy of the contestant.

Participants in any other contest now being run or which may be run by the American will not debar any one from entering the contest.

Each contestant or any or all members of the family will be allowed to submit one, two or three sets of answers, but each set must contain only one answer to each picture. Each set will be considered separately, but no contestant can win more than one prize. All employes of the American and their families are absolutely barred from participating in this contest.

In the event of there being no complete lists of correct answers, prizes will be awarded to the persons submitting the nearest correct solutions. In case of a tie, award will be made on the basis of neatness and exact accuracy, but if the tie cannot be decided in that way the last contestants will receive similar prizes.

Do not send your answers now. Keep them from day to day and at the end of the contest arrange them in numerical order and then send them all in at one time.

Under no circumstances should contestants begin to send in their answers now, but any answers sent in before the last picture is printed will not be considered.

Time will be a factor in awarding the prizes. The first answers sent in after the contest closes will stand no better chance of winning a prize than the last answers submitted.

All answers must be delivered at the BOSTON AMERICAN CONTEST HEADQUARTERS, 275 Devonshire Street, Boston, Mass., either by mail or in person, within the specified time limit. It is contemplated to give contestants ten days to two weeks after the close of the contest to prepare their answers, so that they can be sent in altogether at one time.

The American will not be responsible for the receipt of any answers unless sent by registered mail and addressed to "PROVERB CONTEST EDITOR, 275 Devonshire Street, Boston, Mass."

In case contestants desire further information they should address their questions to PROVERB CONTEST EDITOR, Boston American, 275 Devonshire St., Boston, Mass.

There will be seventy-five puzzle pictures in the series used in the contest. The solutions of these pictures may be sent in on the coupons printed in the Daily and Sunday American, or may be written on separate slips of paper, but the coupon is desirable, but not necessary.

The BOSTON AMERICAN PROVERB CONTEST reserves the right to make any change in, or addition to, these conditions that he may deem necessary for properly conducting the contest, and the decision on any question which may arise will be absolutely final.

Using Men in Jail to Starve, Undersell and Impoverish Those Out of Jail

Every Self-Respecting State Should Forbid the Convicts to Compete with Free Labor. Every State Should Have the Right to Shut Out Convict Labor from Other States

Copyright, 1911, by American Journal-Examiner.

The State owes to the convict education of the mind and the hand. The convict, the product of environment, is more often than not a victim of conditions beyond his control. He is entitled to kindness and to every possible consideration in his disgrace.

It is an outrage that the majority of the States in the Union should utilize the convicts as money-making machines; outrageous above all that tens of thousands of convicts employed at slave labor, on worse than slave food, should be permitted to compete in the open market with men and with women and children outside of the prison walls.

Here in Massachusetts our men and women prisoners are forced to manufacture shoes and clothing which are sold in the open market in competition with free labor. Governor Foss has determined to stamp out this practice. He declared in a recent message to the Legislature:

"I believe this condition is grossly unfair to labor, and to the prisoners and to the State itself. It must be discontinued at once."

Every self-respecting State should forbid this competition of the convict with free labor. It is a competition that brings about the vilest of labor conditions.

Laws should forbid everywhere the competition of convict labor with free labor, and each State should have the right to exclude products of convict labor from other States.

We receive upon this subject, and print gladly, recommending it to the attention of earnest men, a convincing communication from Mr. A. W. Stypes, of Kansas City, Missouri. Missouri, unfortunately, is one of the States with the contemptible system that permits the convict to compete with and impoverish the honest worker.

The convict must have employment of some form. It would be inhuman to keep him idle. The suggestion that convicts be put to work at the making of good roads is an excellent suggestion. Such roads might be built where they would otherwise not be built for centuries, perhaps.

And convicts not sufficiently strong for the best kind of work, which is in the open air, should be employed in manufacturing objects to be used exclusively in charitable institutions, orphan asylums, prisons, hospitals and similar institutions.

The labor of the convict should never enter as a factor into the general work of the world.

We recommend Mr. Stypes's communication to the voters in general and to law-makers especially.

Editor AMERICAN:

I have for some time been imbued with the idea that prison labor as it is employed to-day is a crime against those poor women and girls who are deprived of the ability to earn a livelihood through the unfair competition of our State penitentiaries. Especially is this true in the garment lines, and we presume in other lines, also, with which I am not familiar.

We have been thrown in close contact with a number of the large work clothing manufacturers in this part of the country, and I have been in a position as an outsider to see what this unfair competition means to the workers as well as the manufacturers.

In our State here, it is a fact that our penitentiaries manufacture more overalls than all of the factories in the State combined, and this output is sold at such unreasonable figures that these factories have been forced to reduce their force to about one-half and to reduce the wage in proportion, in order to meet this unfair competition.

The need of legislation is apparent to all who give this matter consideration, and it has only been shelved through the public's ignorance and the powerful pressure brought to bear by the concerns who have made millions out of this convict labor.

There are several bills before the House of Representatives which give promise to regulate through the Interstate Commerce law the sale of goods outside the State in which they are made, and to give to each State the right to regulate the matter and say whether the goods manufactured in an outside State shall come into communities not permitting convict labor.

There are about thirty States in the Union permitting contractors to purchase the labor of prisoners for manufacturing purposes. The volume of goods turned out by each prisoner is far in excess of anything that can be done by outside labor, and the aggregate is appalling. Not only is this so in garment manufacturing, but also shoes, saddlery and various other commodities upon which prices are low; and the outside manufacturer is compelled to find some method of meeting this unjust competition, for the cost of production is too low for any one to compete with it on a strictly fair basis.

The suppression of this evil will do more to eliminate the evils of child labor, sweat shops and the farming-out of goods in the tenement districts of cities than anything else that can be done. It will be a long step in the campaign for clean manufacturing methods and sanitary, well lighted plants and freedom from all the evils that now exist. It will permit the manufacture on a great many lines of goods in an entirely different atmosphere and will put goods on the market of an entirely different character than are being shown to-day.

It will do more to benefit the people of the United States who are most in need of assistance—that is, the widow with a family to support, the woman with a worthless husband to support, the daughter of the laboring man, who, through no fault of her own, is not able to afford the clothes to keep up the appearance necessary to find employment in other lines.

The very man who is confined in the penitentiary is forced to take the means of livelihood from his family by being compelled to produce this merchandise which deprives his family of their only available work.

Statistics will show there is no other means of employment for a woman which gives her the freedom and the remuneration for her work as does the garment manufacturing industry, which permits her to stay away from her work for days at a time, if necessary, to perform her necessary household duties.

Almost any manufacturing plant, especially the garment lines, will credit these women for the actual work performed whenever they may be able to be there.

You may say that it is necessary to keep the convict busy, but there are hundreds of ways other than this which would be immensely profitable to the community.

The most notable of these is the improvement of roads, which permits quick communication between points and the rapid transportation of products to the market.

The cry of "good roads" associations throughout the country is, "Open up your jails, penitentiaries and prisons; a solution is at hand for your most difficult problems. Bad men on bad roads make good roads, while good roads make good men."

So far, this has become a slogan, and no topic of prison news to-day is more widely discussed in the press from coast to coast than this—to employment of convicts in public road building.

It is a startling statement, but we have no less authority for it than the New York National Committee on Prison Labor, that $10,000,000 worth of prison-made goods are annually being shipped into New York city from other States, most of it coming from the central western part of this country.

It is the duty of the public to demand that the conditions of the prisoner in these institutions shall conduce to his own development. The public should also demand that the State receive adequate return for the capital invested and a return for the expenses entailed. The public has a right to demand that the stability of the market be protected from unfair competition, and the State itself profit, if profit there be over a fair wage for the prisoners, from the manufactures of the State. Modern methods must be adapted to prison industries, which should be conducted on a basis of recent efficiency and under conditions at least equal to those demanded from individual manufacturing concerns.

I have repeatedly noticed such conditions, exactly as outlined in our illustration, where destitute women have been denied the privilege to make an honest dollar through this unjust condition, that it makes it impossible for the legitimate manufacturing concern to pay a fair wage or to operate at full capacity, robbing these women of the most natural work they can find, and it is a disgrace that the American public should not be informed of this condition, and that the unjust child labor and sweat shop conditions should be attributed to the wrong source, making it impossible to get the much-needed legislation owing to the interests which are at work to keep this convict labor in the hands of a few unscrupulous manufacturers.

Sincerely yours,

A. W. STYPES.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox's Article

Nothing is Wasted Which We Give Willingly and Lovingly to Others.

While Economy Is a Virtue, Parsimony Is a Crime; Nothing Dwarfs the Whole Nature More Than Parsimony; Generosity Does Not Grow in a Night.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Written for the Boston American by

Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1911, by the National News Association

ONE of the first lessons drilled into the youthful brain by the gimlet of continual homilies is the idea of economy.

"Waste not, want not." "Save the pennies and the dollars will take care of themselves" and a score of other old adages are given the young mind to train it in the way it should go.

But while economy is a virtue, parsimony is a crime; and few parents draw a distinction between the two in talking to their children. I believe in saving a portion of one's earnings; I believe in keeping in advance of necessity, because it means usefulness, instead of dependence; lifting, instead of leaning; hopefulness, instead of fear, in facing the future.

But of two misfortunes, I would rather see a child lean toward extravagance, if that extravagance were coupled with generosity, than toward a miserly tendency to accumulate and save.

Let Generosity Stand Side by Side with Economy in Your Heart

Nothing dwarfs the whole nature more than parsimony. A young man whose leading thought is economy, and who counts every cent over and over with miserly care before indulging in a necessary expenditure or a graceful courtesy toward a friend, is certain to grow narrow in his sympathies and prejudiced in his opinions, and, like a dwarfed, perverted vine tree, his tendrils will turn in and cling about himself instead of reaching out to adorn the world.

If you are just setting forth in life with an ambition to achieve, let generosity stand side by side with economy in your heart. If they are not there naturally, plant the seeds and water them well and expose the soil to the sun of Love.

They will grow, and great will be the harvest.

If you earn enough to save a few dollars a month out of your wages, make it a rule of investing at least one dollar in some good cause for humanity. Do not give it to the first street beggar or the first professional letter writer who solicits—that will be encouraging pauperism—but find some one more needy than yourself or more unfortunate, and plant your seed of generosity both for the sake of the one who will be benefited and for your own moral growth.

While the deplorable and unworthy conditions continue to exist which make "tipping" waiters and domestics in restaurants and hotels an accepted part of service, do not try to shirk this custom.

Never Allow Yourself to Fear Poverty and Dependence

If you can afford to frequent such places (with no matter what economy) you can afford to "tip" your attendant. You can never reform the country, nor institute new laws by denying a waiter a fee, though many "reformers" go no further than this in their efforts.

And you can dwarf your own nature by trying to save a few dimes and quarters in this mean and unworthy fashion.

Give something, a few pennies, if no more, now and then to aid the animal protective society and the humane educational organizations.

Children and animals never impose upon charity, and you may be sure whatever you do in their behalf is well bestowed.

Consider all such use of your small earnings as seed well planted. So surely as you cultivate this spirit of generosity and helpfulness so surely shall prosperity attend your effort as the years pass, and so surely shall your enterprises meet with success.

Besides this you will act as a stimulant to others who have more means to bestow; and your few dollars shall be augmented by other dollars until an endless chain is formed and tight purses shall be opened and hard hearts softened by your example.

Never for an instant allow yourself to fear poverty and dependence. There is a type of so-called generosity which leads to the almshouse. Many a man who is called "a generous, open-hearted fellow, who puts his hand in his pocket for every friend," dies bankrupt and homeless. But investigation will prove it is his wastefulness, outside of his generosity, which brings disaster.

Nothing is wasted which we give willingly and lovingly to others, even if we find it was not worthily bestowed, for the impulse left its benefit on our lives and characters; but the money spent in show, display and dissipation, in feasting and in extravagant entertaining, in a desire to outdo our neighbors, or to make our enemies jealous, that, indeed, is the waste which leads to want.

Back of each visible being stands a host of invisibles, and by the nature of your thoughts and desires and ambitions you determine the class of these invisibles who come at bidding to lend countenance and strength to your undertakings.

Generosity Is a Plant That Does Not Grow in a Night

Decide for yourself whether you desire the co-operation of the earth-bound gourmand, drunkard and race-track suicide, the miser and money hoarder, or the great Spirits of Light who were the philanthropists and helpers of earth when here.

We choose our unseen companions as we choose our earthly associates, and by the company we keep are we known here and beyond.

Were I the mother of a marriageable daughter I should hesitate to see her become the wife of a man noted primarily for his economy.

The influence of a man upon a woman in matters concerning money is far-reaching and subtle. I have known a woman of financial independence and generous proclivities to become utterly transformed by marriage with a man whose one idea of life was the accumulation of money.

And let this mania take root in a nature and it renders it impervious even to the fear of ridicule and scorn of associates; for such a man believes always that in the long run his money will make him a power and bring him the respect he is forfeiting by his petty meanness along the way.

But that is an error which he either discovers too late or else remains in ignorance of to the end, which is sadder still.

The man or woman who waits until fortune is won to be generous in small matters remains a miser to the end of life.

Generosity is a plant which does not grow in a night. It needs cultivating, guiding and pruning. Then the flowers are beautiful—its fruit precious.

No fabled chain of Arion
Can chain you to the sod;
You are the child of glory,
The messenger of God.

Every manufacturer in New England, every banker, every lawyer, every student of economics, every one who takes an interest in the problems of the times, will do well to read in next Sunday's AMERICAN an interview which Mr. C. O'Connell Galvin, the AMERICAN'S special commissioner to Ireland, had in the House of Commons with Sir Alfred Mond, M.P., head of the Cobden Club, who, answering Mr. Galvin's question, "Why do the English people continue to support free trade?" gives facts and reasons of the highest interest and import.
